Introduction

Dispersed on three adjacent sites, Norwich is a large and complex prison and poses a significant management challenge. At our previous inspection we found a prison that was improving from a low base, but that was also beginning to clarify and define more clearly its role and purpose. At this inspection we found that Norwich was still better than it has been historically, but that it was in need of a period of management stability and focus to provide impetus and the opportunity to realise planned improvements.

The prison appeared less safe than when we last inspected. Prisoner experiences during their first days after arrival were mixed and we were, for example, not assured that all first night risk assessments were properly followed up. Induction modules were too often missed and the induction of vulnerable prisoners was inadequate. Prisoner perceptions of safety on the prison's reception site were concerning, something that was particularly the case among vulnerable prisoners on A wing. We also observed limited supervision by staff on some wings. Prisoner perceptions of safety on the Local Discharge Unit (LDU) and Britannia House were much better.

The number of incidents of self-harm was high but we were concerned that support for those in crisis and day to day care was limited. Too many prisoners in self-harm crisis found themselves segregated or in special accommodation. Many of our previous recommendations concerning the issue of self-harm had not been implemented. High levels of use of force and special accommodation were evident and the segregation unit was poor. The situation for young prisoners had improved, however, and the outcomes they experienced were now comparable with adult prisoners.

The standard of accommodation was mixed across the three sites. Many cells and communal areas were poor, particularly on E wing and the LDU. Staff-prisoner relationships were reasonable, although often distant and somewhat passive. Work on diversity had improved although much more needed to be done. Health provision was improving, and mental health support was now good. Environmental conditions in the inpatient facility were, however, poor.

Prisoners' time out of cell remained low for many on the reception site, although it was considerably better on the LDU and at Britannia House. Unemployment was still too high – around 50% on the reception site – yet not all the regime activity places were fully utilised. Much of the work was mundane and provision was poor for vulnerable prisoners. Again the situation was better for LDU prisoners and very good for those held in the open Britannia House facility. There was evidence of improving quality in the provision of learning and skills and there were some encouraging and well developed plans to improve quantity, quality and organisation of purposeful activity. Our findings at this inspection, however, were that progress in this important area had been insufficient and too slow.

Resettlement work remained solid and well managed. Prisoners in scope for offender management were well supported, but custody planning for many short-term prisoners was lacking. Public protection arrangements were robust, and there was good provision in most of the reducing reoffending pathways. Access to offending behaviour work was, despite the clear need, limited.

Overall this is a critical report. Norwich is a difficult prison to manage and we were encouraged that the management team seemed to have a good grasp of the challenges they faced, although progress needed to be maintained and in some areas speeded up. Meaningful plans were in place and there was optimism among managers that they could take the prison forward. We shared their optimism.

A, B, C, D, E and M wings were located on the reception site of the prison, as was the segregation unit.

A wing: induction unit, first night centre, integrated drug treatment
B and C wings: local prison accommodating category B and C prisoners

E wing: sex offenders

M wing: category C prisoners serving two years or less

F and G wings constituted the local discharge unit (LDU), which was located alongside L wing and the health care unit.

F and G wings: local discharge unit (LDU) accommodating low risk category C prisoners from the East of England, serving 12 months or less

Healthy prison summary

Introduction

HP1 Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Prisons is an independent, statutory organisation which reports on the treatment and conditions of those detained in prisons, young offender institutions, immigration detention facilities and police, courts and customs custody.

HP2 All inspections carried out by HM Inspectorate of Prisons contribute to the UK's response to its international obligations under the Optional Protocol to the UN Convention against Torture and other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (OPCAT). OPCAT requires that all places of detention are visited regularly by independent bodies – known as the National Preventive Mechanism (NPM) – which monitor the treatment of and conditions for detainees. HM Inspectorate of Prisons is one of several bodies making up the NPM in the UK.

HP3 All Inspectorate of Prisons reports include a summary of an establishment's performance against the model of a healthy prison. The four criteria of a healthy prison are:

Safety prisoners, particularly the most vulnerable, are held safely

Respect prisoners are treated with respect for their human dignity

Purposeful activity prisoners are able, and expected, to engage in activity that is likely to benefit them

Resettlement prisoners are prepared for their release into the community and helped to reduce the likelihood of reoffending.

HP4 Under each test, we make an assessment of outcomes for prisoners and therefore of the establishment's overall performance against the test. In some cases, this performance will be affected by matters outside the establishment's direct control, which need to be addressed by the National Offender Management Service.

- outcomes for prisoners are good against this healthy prison test.

  There is no evidence that outcomes for prisoners are being adversely affected in any significant areas.
- outcomes for prisoners are reasonably good against this healthy prison test. There is evidence of adverse outcomes for prisoners in only a small number of areas. For the majority, there are no significant concerns. Procedures to safeguard outcomes are in place.
- outcomes for prisoners are not sufficiently good against this healthy prison test.

There is evidence that outcomes for prisoners are being adversely affected in many areas or particularly in those areas of greatest importance to the well-being of prisoners. Problems/concerns, if left unattended, are likely to become areas of serious concern.

- outcomes for prisoners are poor against this healthy prison test.

There is evidence that the outcomes for prisoners are seriously affected by current practice. There is a failure to ensure even adequate treatment of and/or conditions for prisoners. Immediate remedial action is required.

HP5 The Inspectorate conducts follow-up inspections to assess progress against recommendations made in the previous full inspection. Follow-up inspections may be announced or unannounced and are proportionate to risk. In full follow-up inspections inspectors conduct a new inspection of the establishment and also assess whether recommendations made at the previous inspection have been achieved. They also investigate areas of serious concern identified in the previous inspection, or matters of concern subsequently drawn to the attention of the Chief Inspector. Inspectors use the findings of prisoner surveys (where available), prisoner focus groups, research analysis of prison data and observation. This enables a reassessment of previous healthy prison assessments held by the Inspectorate on all establishments, and published in reports from 2004 onwards. Full follow-up reports are presented as full inspection reports with a new set of recommendations. Repeated recommendations are, however, indicated within the main report, and a list of recommendations from the previous inspection, and our assessment of whether they have been achieved, is contained in the appendices.

Safety

- Reception was generally satisfactory but first night arrangements needed attention. There were still problems with induction, particularly for vulnerable prisoners. Formal violence reduction processes were robust, but many prisoners on the reception site felt unsafe. The incidence of violence had fallen but was still high. The number of open self-harm monitoring forms and incidents of self-harm were high and case management generally inadequate. Vulnerable prisoners had a poorer experience in many areas, but outcomes for young adults were now comparable to other prisoners. Security was well managed and drug testing results not excessive. Use of force had increased and governance was weak, and the use of special accommodation was very high and often unjustified. The segregation unit regime was poor. Support for drug dependent prisoners was improving. Outcomes for prisoners were now not sufficiently good against this healthy prison test.
- HP7 At the last inspection in 2010, we found that Norwich was performing reasonably well against this healthy prison test. We made 50 recommendations in the area of safety. At this follow-up inspection we found that 17 of the recommendations had been achieved, seven had been partially achieved, 25 had not been achieved and one was no longer relevant.
- HP8 There were some delays in prisoners arriving from courts. Serving prisoners provided good support at a local court to assist prisoners being moved to Norwich.
- HP9 Reception procedures for most prisoners took place on the reception site and were swift. Arrangements for vulnerable prisoners were satisfactory. The facilities in reception remained limited, and the holding rooms were austere. Reception staff were polite to prisoners and searching was carried out sensitively. The supervision of prisoners in the large holding room was limited.

- HP10 All new arrivals had a first night risk interview in private but some identified issues were not followed up. Not all prisoners got a shower and telephone call on their first night. Listeners were available in reception and on A wing which was the first night and induction unit. Induction had been revamped and was reasonable, but was delayed for some prisoners and some did not complete it. Induction for vulnerable prisoners was limited and underdeveloped. In our survey,¹ prisoners were negative about many aspects of their treatment during their first few days at the prison. The early days procedures for the local discharge unit (LDU) and Britannia House category D resettlement unit were satisfactory.
- HP11 Formal arrangements to deal with violence were good, and the collection of data on the number and nature of incidents was better than we usually see. The published violence reduction policy document was relevant, based on a proper analysis of the pattern of violence in the prison, and informed by frequent consultation with prisoners. Monitoring of the implementation of the policy at safer custody committee meetings was also very good. The number of violent incidents remained high but there had been a reduction in fights and assaults since the last inspection, and some evidence that recently introduced formal procedures had helped reduce incidents.
- HP12 Over a fifth of the prisoners we surveyed in the reception site said that they did not feel safe at the moment, and nearly half said they had felt unsafe at some time. Too many also said that they had been victimised by prisoners and staff. In contrast, prisoners on the LDU mainly felt safe. We were struck by the lack of staff supervision on reception site wings.
- HP13 The suicide prevention policy was well promoted. The analysis of data for information on patterns and trends of self-harming behaviour was very good. The number of assessment, care in custody and teamwork (ACCT) self-harm monitoring documents was high, with as many as 40 cases or more. The number of incidents of self-harm was also high. The quality of ACCTs varied, but many were poor and most did not evidence consistently good standards of day-to-day care. Many prisoners on ACCTs had little to occupy them.
- HP14 Vulnerable prisoners had a poorer experience than others in a range of areas, and those on A wing felt less safe. Accommodation on E wing (vulnerable prisoner unit) was poor, and intimidation by other prisoners remained evident. Young adults were well integrated throughout the prison, most could participate in a normal regime, and the disruption and violence we found at the last inspection had reduced. In our - survey, however, young adults were still more negative than others across the range of questions.

- HP15 There was a proportionate approach to security, but the strip searching of some prisoners in the absence of intelligence was unnecessary. Intelligence was well managed and, except for suspicion drug testing, actions were responsive. Mandatory drug testing (MDT) was adequately managed and not excessive, and supply/reduction initiatives were reasonably well integrated.
- HP16 The administration of the incentives and earned privileges (IEP) scheme was good, but prisoners had little faith in its fairness.
- HP17 The number of adjudications was high and, while mostly justified, some could have been better dealt with less formally. There was no quality assurance of records of hearings, but they were generally of a reasonable standard.
- HP18 The recorded use of force was high, and its governance was weak and required improvement. Planned interventions were not properly filmed or reviewed. Recorded use of special accommodation was very high, and sometimes appeared unnecessary, and many remained there for too long. We found evidence of further use that was not appropriately recorded or justified. Too many prisoners had their clothing removed inappropriately and were located in special accommodation while on self-harm monitoring.
- HP19 Use of segregation had reduced since the last inspection but was still high.

  Accommodation in the segregation unit was poor, as was the regime. The quality of documentation resulting from reviews required improvement, particularly to set prisoners meaningful targets. Too many prisoners were routinely held in the segregation unit on ACCT documents. The relaxed relationships between staff and prisoners were not reflected in individual records.
- HP20 There had been progress in ensuring that opiate-dependent prisoners had prompt access to comprehensive assessment and clinical support. Clinical and psychosocial services were of a good standard, and prisoners were positive about their care. Staffing had increased and services were more integrated, but further progress was needed.

Respect

HP21 Standards in many cells were poor. Staff-prisoner relationships were generally reasonable but distant. Personal officer work was still limited. There had been good work to address diversity, but black and minority ethnic and disabled prisoners continued to have poorer perceptions. Assistance for foreign national and disabled prisoners had improved, but more was needed. Faith provision was now good. Confidence in the complaints process had improved. Health care provision was in transition, but the quality of care had improved. The environment of the inpatient unit remained poor. Mental health services had developed, although some gaps remained. Food was adequate, although prisoners were unhappy with it. Outcomes for prisoners were still not sufficiently good against this healthy prison test.

- HP22 At the last inspection in 2010, we found that Norwich was not performing sufficiently well against this healthy prison test. We made 94 recommendations in the area of respect.<sup>2</sup> At this follow-up inspection we found that 50 of the recommendations had been achieved, nine had been partially achieved and 35 had not been achieved.
- HP23 The standard of accommodation varied greatly. Conditions on the local discharge unit and the dormitories on E wing were particularly poor. Britannia House provided a reasonable environment. Outside areas were generally clean, but many communal facilities on both of the closed sites were grubby. Toilets were often very poor and dirty, and not all were screened. Some single cells were still used to hold two prisoners and were too small, as were the four-bed dormitories on E wing. Not all prisoners could shower every day. Staff response to cell bells was sometimes slow. Many prisoners had little confidence in the applications system, which was not quality assured or tracked.
- HP24 In our survey, most prisoners said that staff treated them with respect and that there was a member of staff they could turn to if they had a problem, although minority groups were more negative. Some prisoners told us that staff were disinterested and unhelpful, although others were more positive. Our own observations were mixed and reflected what prisoners told us. The personal officer scheme remained limited, with many prisoners unsure who their personal officer was.
- HP25 Provision for diversity had improved. A comprehensive equality policy was backed by specific policies for foreign nationals and older and younger prisoners, and there were detailed guidance and practical support for staff on its implementation. The equality action team addressed issues effectively through an equality action plan, although no external community groups were represented. The investigation of diversity complaints was good and replies to prisoners informative. However, there had been no recent independent quality assurance checks. An active group of trained prisoner equality representatives provided valuable support to other prisoners, particularly on the induction wing, but there was no formal consultation with minority groups of prisoners.
- HP26 Our survey showed that black and minority ethnic prisoners remained less positive than white prisoners in a range of areas. However, those we spoke to individually and in our groups were generally positive about staff. Problems identified through ethnic monitoring data analysis had been adequately investigated and appropriate measures taken.
- HP27 The provision of translated materials and use of telephone interpreting for foreign nationals were very good. Immigration matters were managed actively, although a high number of detainees were held beyond their sentence. There had been significant local efforts to move them on, but this remained unacceptable.
- HP28 In our survey, prisoners with disabilities were also negative across a range of subjects, including safety. New arrivals with disabilities were now identified and a detailed database kept. Evacuation plans had been agreed where needed. Some limited accommodation had been adapted. Ongoing support for many of those with an identified disability was ad hoc. There was an active older prisoners group.

 $<sup>^{2}</sup>$  This included two recommendations about the incentives and earned privileges scheme which, in our updated Expectations (Version 4, 2012), now appear under the healthy prison area of safety. HMP Norwich

- HP29 A fully integrated chaplaincy played an active role in the prison, provided for all faiths, and offered pastoral support to prisoners. Faith facilities were adequate and there was a good range of religious study groups and other provision, although some clashed with other activities.
- HP30 There was a relatively low number of prisoner complaints. The standard of responses was generally good and quality assurance reasonably effective.
- HP31 There were insufficient legal services for prisoners and no trained legal services officers. Bail information provision appeared worse than at the last inspection.
- HP32 Prisoners were dissatisfied with some aspects of health care, particularly the appointments system, although it had improved since our last inspection. The environment in the main health care unit remained poor. Some other clinical facilities, such as day care, were of a high standard but underused. There was a reasonable range of primary care clinics and opportunities for the care of lifelong conditions. The waiting time to see a GP was short. Pharmacy and dental services were generally good, but some facilities were awaiting upgrade. The inpatient and older prisoner units offered good standards of care but inpatients did not have evening association. Mental health services were much improved but primary mental health care was still underdeveloped.
- HP33 The range and standard of food was reasonable but unpopular with prisoners. Prisoners could not yet dine out of their cells. The prison shop list was comprehensive, and the system generally worked well. Some new arrivals had to wait over a week for their first order, but they did have the opportunity to buy multiple reception packs.

Purposeful activity

- HP34 Time out of cell and access to association on the reception site remained poor for many prisoners. On the LDU, prisoners were unlocked for much of the day. Britannia House continued to provide good vocational opportunities for a small number of prisoners. Management of learning and skills had begun to improve, but unemployment remained too high with around half of prisoners on the reception site without anything to do. There were too few vocational training opportunities despite there being advanced plans to increase the number. Education provision had improved but more needed to be done, including for those with learning difficulties and non-English speakers. Punctuality was better, but not all the activity places were used. Access to the library had improved for most prisoners. PE remained impressive. Outcomes for prisoners had not yet improved sufficiently and were still poor against this healthy prison test.
- HP35 At the last inspection in 2010, we found that Norwich was performing poorly against this healthy prison test. We made 21 recommendations in the area of purposeful activity. At this follow-up inspection we found that just six of the recommendations had been achieved, nine had been partially achieved and six had not been achieved.
- HP36 Time out of cell for prisoners in the LDU was good at over eight hours a day, but it was much less for many prisoners on the reception site. Some slippage to the regime and variations in the application of the core day added to the problems. Association was limited to two periods a week for many prisoners, and those not fully employed could have as little as two hours out of cell on some days.

- HP37 The leadership and management of learning and skills and work activities had improved. A recent reorganisation had provided a strong impetus for the development of learning and skills, and there were already signs of a more coherent approach, but it was early days. Plans for increasing the range of vocational training and work activities were well advanced but there remained insufficient progress against our previous recommendations.
- HP38 Around half the prisoners on the reception site were unemployed. Most prisoners in the LDU were engaged in purposeful activities. Punctuality and attendance had improved, although not all places on the reception site were fully utilised and some work was mundane and repetitive, especially in the vulnerable prisoner unit.
- A large number of prisoners were employed on the wings, but the range of this work was not monitored. There remained too little provision for vulnerable prisoners.
   Revision to the education and vocational training provision included more short programmes that better met the needs of short term prisoners.
- HP40 The initial guidance and assessment of learning needs were good but more work was required to identify and support the needs of prisoners who were dyslexic and/or spoke English as an additional language. Achievement of qualifications was good in most areas, especially on short courses, PE and literacy and numeracy. Learners developed high level skills in some work areas, especially in printwork. However, the skills developed by prisoners not following an accredited qualification were rarely recognised or recorded.
- HP41 Teaching and learning were mostly good across both sites, with effective management of behaviour and good use of mentors. The ground floor accommodation for learning and skills in the LDU was a big improvement but it remained poor upstairs. Access to the library had increased for most, but not all, prisoners.
- HP42 The PE provision continued to be very good with increased staff offering a wide range of employment related qualifications across both sites. Significant investment had provided improvements to existing resources and a new gym on the reception site. The outdoor facilities in the LDU were very good and well used, but there were none on the reception site.

Resettlement

HP43 The reducing reoffending strategy was reasonably comprehensive and resettlement work was now based on an up-to-date needs analysis, but there were some gaps in provision. Sentence planning for prisoners managed under offender management was good, but custody planning for those serving less than 12 months needed attention. Regular resettlement drop-in sessions were not yet fully embedded on the reception site. Some indeterminate-sentenced prisoners needed to be progressed more quickly, but public protection arrangements were good. Britannia House continued to provide excellent resettlement opportunities. Services across the resettlement pathways remained reasonable but there needed to be more focus on those released from the reception site. Outcomes for prisoners were still reasonably good against this healthy prison test.

- HP44 At the last inspection in 2010, we found that Norwich was performing reasonably well against this healthy prison test. We made 41 recommendations in the area of resettlement. At this follow-up inspection we found that 20 of the recommendations had been achieved, nine had been partially achieved, 10 had not been achieved and two were no longer relevant.
- HP45 The reducing reoffending strategy was reasonably comprehensive and objectives were broadly appropriate. Regular resettlement meetings and separate partnership meetings ensured a well-integrated approach to the management of resettlement, although work for those on short sentences or remand needed development. There had been a comprehensive resettlement analysis, but there were areas of need that were not being met.
- HP46 Around 60% of the population were subject to assessment through the offender assessment system (OASys) and most were up to date. Sentence plan targets were appropriately oriented to risk management and reduction, although staff outside the offender management unit (OMU) were rarely involved in sentence planning. For the quarter of prisoners in scope for offender management, support and engagement by offender supervisors was generally good, with appropriate links to community-based offender managers.
- HP47 All prisoners, including those not subject to offender management, had an initial needs assessment incorporating the resettlement pathways. This was limited and there was no structured follow-up support from personal officers or offender supervisors.
- HP48 Britannia House remained a very good resource. The number of prisoners working out of the prison on projects in the community was commendable. Although working out arrangements under release on temporary licence (ROTL) could be extended to the LDU, the numbers were low.
- HP49 Public protection arrangements were well organised and managed. Interdepartmental risk management and risk assessment meetings were comprehensive in their analysis. Arrangements and support for indeterminate-sentenced prisoners were reasonable. Sentence progress and review arrangements were well managed, but while those early in their sentences were progressed reasonably quickly, there were significant delays for a few.
- HP50 Weekly resettlement drop-in sessions had recently been introduced on the reception site to improve resettlement work and replicate services available on the LDU. Links to and knowledge of resettlement provision was considerably better on the LDU than on the reception site, even though both sites released broadly the same number of prisoners. Preparation for release work needed to be improved.
- HP51 Support for prisoners to gain accommodation on release was reasonable, with the primary focus in the 12 weeks before discharge. In our survey, fewer respondents on the reception site than the comparator said they knew who to contact about accommodation, although responses were significantly better on the LDU.

- HP52 Despite the identification of need, there was minimal support for prisoners needing help with finances. Prisoners could open bank accounts before release and the older prisoner group had regular financial advice input, but no debt management advice available.
- HP53 Arrangements for transferring IDTS prisoners to other prisons were improving. There were positive links with local drug intervention programmes, and good programmes for prisoners with alcohol problems.
- HP54 Prisoners appreciated the regular children's visits. The visitors' centre offered a good and supportive service. The main visits hall remained a poor environment, with significant delays in visitors getting to sessions.
- HP55 Although the resettlement analysis had identified significant need for work on prisoners' attitudes and thinking skills, there was no structured course, other than for substance misuse, to address these issues and no individual work by offender supervisors. There had been considerable problems transferring some prisoners, especially sex offenders, to complete offending behaviour programmes elsewhere.

Main concerns and recommendations

HP56 Concern: Some vulnerable prisoners were still located on A wing where their regime was much poorer, and where they were subject to verbal abuse from other prisoners. The environment on E wing was poor, and the regime they received was still limited.

Recommendation: All vulnerable prisoners should be kept in a safe environment and be able to access a full regime. (Repeated recommendation HP49)

HP57 Concern: The quality of case management for the high number of open ACCTs was varied; much of it was poor with little evidence of good day-to-day care. Many prisoners on an ACCT had little to occupy them, and too many were held in segregation or special accommodation.

Recommendation: Case management and review arrangements for prisoners at risk of self-harm should be improved.

HP58 Concern: Use of force was high but oversight and management was poor. Use of special accommodation was very high, sometimes appeared unnecessary and often went on for too long

Recommendation: Prisoners on assessment, care in custody and teamwork (ACCT) documents should only be held in the segregation unit, including special accommodation, when there are exceptional circumstances to justify this, and governance of use of force, particularly special accommodation, planned interventions and drawing and use of batons, should be improved.

HP59 Concern: Many single cells were used for double occupancy, and the dormitories on E wing were inadequate.

Recommendation: Single cells should not be used for double occupancy, and the dormitories on E wing should not be used to house four prisoners.

HP60 Concern: Many prisoners on the reception site spent long periods in their cells, and around 50% were unemployed with only around two hours a day out of their cell. Slippage in the core day and regime added to the problem.

Recommendation: The time prisoners have out of cell should be improved, particularly for those on the reception site and unemployed, and the core day should be closely adhered to.

HP61 Concern: About half the prisoners on the reception site were unemployed and much of the work available was mundane, repetitive and did not provide a realistic experience of work. Some work, education and other regime activity places were not fully utilised.

Recommendation: The number and quality of activity places should be adequate to meet the identified needs of the population, and monitored to ensure they are fully utilised.

HP62 Concern: Sentence planning and care management for those not subject to formal offender management and, in particular, those serving short sentences was limited and need to improve. Meaningful targets needed to be set with the aim of reducing the risk of further harm or reoffending.

Recommendation: All prisoners, irrespective of their length of stay in custody, should have their resettlement needs fully assessed, access to appropriate services, and a regularly reviewed custody plan with specific targets for their resettlement needs.

Section 1: Safety

The reference numbers at the end of some recommendations indicate that that they are repeated, and provide the paragraph location of the previous recommendation in the last report.

Courts, escorts and transfers

Expected outcomes:

Prisoners transferring to and from the prison are treated safely, decently and efficiently.

- 1.1 Prisoners were escorted in dirty vans. Journey were usually short but stops were not offered on longer escorts. Escort staff were courteous and disembarkation was adequate. Some prisoners spent too long in court awaiting transfer. Serving prisoners were employed at court to assist new arrivals.
- 1.2 In our survey, only 65% of respondents, against the comparator of 76%, said that the escort van was clean. We saw some vans that were dirty and had graffiti. Most journey times were under two hours, but for those experiencing longer journeys, the prisoner escort records (PERs) did not indicate that a toilet stop had been given. Most prisoners arrived at the establishment before 7.30pm, and reception was open over lunch.
- 1.3 Escort staff were courteous to prisoners and in our survey 80% of respondents said they were treated well by escort staff. Prisoners were disembarked from escort vans quickly and were not normally handcuffed. Relevant documentation travelled with prisoners during escort, and prisoners were given advance notice of planned transfer.
- 1.4 PERs showed that some prisoners had spent up to six hours in the court cells awaiting transfer to the prison once they had been dealt with. Food and drinks were routinely offered to prisoners at court.
- 1.5 Two prisoners on release on temporary licence were assigned to the local court to assist prisoners due to be sent to the prison for the first time. Prisoners appreciated this initiative.

Recommendation

1.6 Prisoners should not spend protracted time in court cells after they are dealt with by the courts, and should be escorted to the prison at the earliest opportunity.

Housekeeping point

1.7 Escort vans should be clean and free from graffiti, and prisoners travelling long distances should be offered a toilet break.

Good practice

1.8 The use of serving prisoners at local courts to reassure and help prisoners due to be transferred to the prison helped to settle prisoners during their first night in custody.

Early days in custody

Expected outcomes:

Prisoners are treated with respect and feel safe on their arrival into prison and for the first few days in custody. Prisoners' individual needs are identified and addressed, and they feel supported on their first night. During a prisoner's induction he/she is made aware of the prison routines, how to access available services and how to cope with imprisonment.

- 1.9 Prisoners had generally poor perceptions of their early days in custody, although those in the local discharge unit were more positive. Reception was clean and the process swift but there was little to occupy prisoners and supervision was limited. Vulnerable new arrivals were safely processed. All new arrivals had a first night interview but issues were not followed up. Induction for most prisoners was reasonable but was ineffective for vulnerable prisoners.
- 1.10 The reception area was clean and had recently been refurbished but it remained small, and the four holding rooms had no natural light and were austere. The reception process for most prisoners was swift and less than two hours. In our survey, 76% of respondents, against the comparator of 58%, said that they were treated well in reception and 82%, against 73%, said they were searched respectfully. We observed reception staff who were courteous and friendly, and all the new arrivals we saw were offered a meal and a drink.
- 1.11 Information on the reception process was available in the holding rooms and a limited amount was translated into foreign languages. There was little to occupy prisoners in the holding room other than a television in one. Supervision of the holding rooms was limited.
- 1.12 In our survey, 68% of respondents, against the comparator of 81%, said they saw someone from health services in reception. There was a dedicated room for the health services staff and during the inspection we observed that a nurse saw all new arrivals. In our survey, only 24% of respondents said they had access to a Listener in reception. A Listener had recently been employed to work there.
- 1.13 There was a vulnerable prisoner strategy for reception, and vulnerable new arrivals were separated from mainstream prisoners and underwent reception individually.
- 1.14 First night risk interviews were carried out in private. We were assured that all new arrivals received the first night interview but there was no evidence that staff followed up identified issues, such as care for dependants.
- 1.15 Prisoner induction orderlies resided on the first night (A) wing and welcomed all new arrivals. Listeners also lived on A wing and were available for new arrivals.
- 1.16 In our survey, only 17% of respondents, against the comparator of 34%, said that they had a shower on their first night, and only 22%, against 58%, said they received a free telephone call. As a consequence, we were not assured that all new arrivals received a shower or telephone

- call. The problem was compounded when prisoners were located on to the first night wing after 7.30pm.
- 1.17 Induction for most mainstream prisoners started the first working day after they arrived, but could take up to a week to start for some prisoners. Induction lasted one and half days and included a comprehensive electronic presentation facilitated by prisoners and staff in a suitable room. An induction tracking system highlighted that not every prisoner completed all the induction modules and some completed none at all. However, records showed that this had improved over the previous two months.
- 1.18 Induction for vulnerable prisoners was insufficient with many receiving no formal induction. There was an over-reliance on one prisoner to see newly arrived vulnerable prisoners and give them an induction talk.
- 1.19 Early days arrangements in the local discharge unit (LDU) and Britannia House resettlement unit were reasonable, and prisoners here were more positive about their experience.

Recommendations

- 1.20 The prison should work with prisoners to understand their negative perceptions of the early days procedures reflected in our survey, and should ensure that new arrivals receive their basic entitlements and that their immediate needs are met.
- 1.21 Information about the reception process should be available in a range of languages.
- 1.22 Staff should routinely monitor prisoners in reception holding rooms. (Repeated recommendation 1.35)
- 1.23 The first night interview record should be expanded to evidence relevant referrals and follow up information. (Repeated recommendation 1.40)
- 1.24 All new arrivals should receive the full induction programme. (Repeated recommendation HP47)

Housekeeping point

1.25 Reading materials for new arrivals should be available in reception.

Bullying and violence reduction

Expected outcomes:

Everyone feels and is safe from bullying and victimisation (which includes verbal and racial abuse, theft, threats of violence and assault). Prisoners at risk/subject to victimisation are protected through active and fair systems known to staff, prisoners and visitors, and which inform all aspects of the regime.

1.26 Formal arrangements to deal with violence were good and the collection of data on incidents was very good, as was monitoring of the implementation of the violence reduction policy. The number of violent incidents remained high but there has been a reduction in fights and assaults. Prisoners' perceptions of their safety depended on their location, but those on the reception site and particularly vulnerable prisoners on A wing, were more likely to report feeling unsafe at some point during their time at Norwich. The environment and regime for vulnerable prisoners was poor. The use of part of the first night wing for vulnerable prisoners remained inappropriate and there was still intimidation by other prisoners on the wing. Young adults were better integrated than at the last inspection.

- 1.27 There had been a full review of the arrangements to reduce violence in early 2011, which had led to the publication of a new violence reduction policy document. It was relevant, based on a detailed analysis of the patterns of violence in the prison, and further informed by frequent consultation with prisoners through annual safety and routine exit surveys. It was further supported by other local policies and procedures, such as the incentive and earned privileges (IEP) scheme and security reporting systems. The priority given to arrangements to deal with the overall level of violence was good and had improved since the last inspection.
- 1.28 A well-constructed safer prison committee met monthly to monitor overall progress of both the violence reduction and suicide prevention strategies. Meetings were always well attended and minutes showed properly focused discussions on prisoner self-harm and suicide prevention, while other forms of violence were properly emphasised. Information provided by the nominated violence reduction coordinator about the number, type and location of violent incidents each month had also improved, and analysis of information to identify trends, patterns and problem areas was better than we usually see.
- 1.29 Formal arrangements to deal with bullying had also been reviewed and modified to produce a simple two-stage system to identify, monitor and change antisocial behaviour. This was based chiefly on IEP sanctions supported by regular reviews to monitor behavioural changes.
- 1.30 Allegations of bullying were treated seriously and investigated promptly, usually by residential senior officers. The quality of investigation into alleged incidents was generally good. Outcomes were recorded and consistently acted upon by residential officers, supported by the violence reduction coordinator. There was evidence that residential officers were confident in implementing the new formal procedures.
- 1.31 Staff entries in documentation were usually good, and behaviour improvement targets were reasonable and achievable. Governance arrangements were also good and management checks of documentation, usually by the violence reduction coordinator, were effective.
- 1.32 The number of violent incidents remained high at over 500 a year, but there had been a reduction of about 15% in the number of fights and assaults since the previous inspection.

  There was evidence that the new formal procedures were helping to further reduce numbers.
- 1.33 Prisoner perceptions about their safety were mixed. Most prisoners in the LDU said that they felt safe and had not been intimidated by staff or other prisoners, and in our survey, only 2% of respondents on the LDU said that they felt unsafe. However, on the reception site, over a fifth of respondents said that they did not feel safe at the moment and nearly half said that they felt unsafe at some time. Too many also said that they had been victimised by other prisoners (37% against the comparator of 21%) and staff (36% against 25%).
- 1.34 As at the last inspection, the vulnerable prisoner unit on E wing was predominately for sex offenders, and a few who felt generally at risk from other prisoners on mainstream units. Decisions to segregate these prisoners had been made appropriately, and the reasons were carefully recorded. The daily regime had not changed. All vulnerable prisoners were offered mundane work every day and were usually out of their cells for most of the core day. They generally said that they felt safe. The environment remained poor. Communal areas were old and worn and many cells were dirty and cramped. The two four-person dormitories were particularly poor and their continued use inappropriate.

- 1.35 A wing continued to provide extra accommodation for vulnerable prisoners, and at the time of inspection, 32 vulnerable prisoners were accommodated there. They spent most of the day locked in their cells without access to purposeful activity or enough association. Intimidation by other prisoners on the wing remained evident (see main recommendation HP56).
- 1.36 Young adults were well integrated throughout the prison. A young adult policy document had been published, which focused staff attention on principles and managerial arrangements for young adults. They were able to participate equally in the prison regime, and the disproportionate level of disruption and violence we found at the last inspection had reduced to that equivalent to other prisoners. Staff responses to erratic behaviour were less reactive than we saw previously, and there were examples where residential officers dealt with angry young prisoners in a calm and caring way to good effect. In our survey, however, young adult respondents were more negative than adults across the range of questions about respectful treatment.

Recommendation

1.37 The high level of violent incidents should be further reduced.

Self-harm and suicide

Expected outcomes:

The prison provides a safe and secure environment which reduces the risk of self-harm and suicide. Prisoners are identified at an early stage and given the necessary support. All staff are aware of and alert to vulnerability issues, are appropriately trained and have access to proper equipment and support.

- 1.38 The suicide prevention policy was well promoted. The analysis of data to provide information about patterns and trends of self-harming behaviour was also good. The number of self-harm monitoring documents and actual self-harm were high. There were gaps in case management arrangements, and the quality of documentation indicated inadequate care of too many prisoners at risk.
- 1.39 A suicide prevention policy document had been published, based on an examination of local practices. Its content was reasonable with a particular focus on the needs of a local prison. Staff and prisoners were aware of its content.
- 1.40 Procedures and protocols described in the document were managed directly by a full-time safer custody manager. She was accountable for ensuring that procedures to manage prisoners at risk from self-harm were properly implemented, and was also a central point for advice and guidance for staff. In practice, much of her time was spent managing issues around deaths in custody. Sadly, there had been 11 deaths in custody since the previous inspection,

- including two self-inflicted deaths. Staff we spoke to were not always sure where to go to if they needed advice about suicide prevention procedures.
- 1.41 The safer custody committee monitored the implementation of the strategy at well-attended monthly meetings. It used a wide range of information, provided by the custodial care manager, to help identify trends and patterns of behaviour by location, type, age, timing and peripheral circumstances of individual incidents.
- 1.42 The Listener scheme had been established but prisoners did not have access to them during the night. Prisoners had 24-hour access to the Samaritans through a direct line mobile telephone. There was no space for Listeners to see prisoners in private on E wing (vulnerable prisoner unit). Some Listeners we interviewed said that they did not feel adequately supported by staff and were not sure that their work was valued.
- 1.43 The number of prisoners on assessment, care in custody and teamwork (ACCT) self-harm monitoring documents was high, with commonly as many as 40 active cases at a time. About three-quarters were for prisoners on the first night (A) wing. Generally there were gaps in the case management of prisoners at risk of self-harm.
- 1.44 Some ACCT documents showed meaningful care plans that reflected positive contact with prisoners and an awareness of ongoing issues. The majority, however, did not demonstrate consistently good standards of day-to-day care or active planning. Many records were lengthy and contained a multitude of entries, most of which were lacking in detail. Too many were generic, repetitive and only occasionally demonstrated good quality interaction (see main recommendation HP57). Many prisoners on an ACCT were not engaged in any formal education or work.

Recommendation

1.45 Support for Listeners, including facilities for them to see prisoners as required and in decent surroundings, should be improved.

Safeguarding (protection of adults at risk)

Expected outcomes:

The prison promotes the welfare of prisoners, particularly adults at risk, and protects them from all kinds of harm and neglect.<sup>3</sup>

- 1.46 A safeguarding strategy to meet the needs of prisoners at risk had been published, and staff generally were aware of their responsibilities.
- 1.47 A safeguarding strategy document published in 2011 set out the goals and objectives to inform policy to deal with the needs of prisoners at risk, including those who may have been in need of community care services because of mental or other disability, age or illness. Its content was relevant to a local prison, and had been informed by consultation with health care specialists

&lt;sup>3</sup> We define an adult at risk as a vulnerable person aged 18 years or over, 'who is or may be in need of community care services by reason of mental or other disability, age or illness; and who is or may be unable to take care of him or herself, or unable to protect him or herself against significant harm or exploitation'. 'No secrets' definition (Department of Health 2000).

- and other professional staff. It was further supported by policies and procedures such as the diversity policy, the Prison Service code of conduct for staff, violence reduction and health care policies.
- 1.48 Safeguarding screening procedures were effective. Assessments of prisoners' risk during their first few days were comprehensive and included cell sharing risk assessments, disability assessments and health care interviews, usually by a registered mental health nurse. Further assessments were carried out by health care professionals (see also paragraph 2.82).
- 1.49 Most staff we spoke to, although not fully aware of the policy, were focused on relevant issues and aware of their personal responsibility to protect prisoners at risk. In practice, prisoners at risk because of mental issues, including those related to age, were managed in health care, the older prisoner unit or through case management by mental health nurses on residential units.

Recommendation

1.50 The governor should initiate contact with the local director of adult social services (DASS) and the local safeguarding adults board (LSAB) to develop local safeguarding processes.

Security

Expected outcomes:

Security and good order are maintained through an attention to physical and procedural matters, including effective security intelligence as well as positive staff-prisoner relationships. Prisoners are safe from exposure to substance misuse while in prison.

- 1.51 Security arrangements were broadly proportionate. Dynamic security was well managed and mostly responsive. Mandatory drug testing arrangements were adequate. Drug supply and demand initiatives were reasonably well integrated.
- 1.52 Security arrangements were generally proportionate and the regime was not unnecessarily restrictive. The security team was focused and taking appropriate measures, in consultation with the safer custody staff.
- 1.53 Dynamic security was well managed and mostly responsive. The 2,500 security information reports (SIRs) submitted between July and December 2011 were processed efficiently and targeted searches were completed within time. Suspicion drug testing had only recently been reintroduced but was appropriately targeted. Seven out of 12 tests had been positive, which was a good start but required further development.
- 1.54 In our survey, only 8% respondents said it was easy to get alcohol in the prison, against the comparator of 15%. However, 9% said they had developed a problem with drugs while in the prison which was worse than at the last inspection, and 13% had developed a problem with diverted medication, which was significantly worse than comparator prisons.
- 1.55 Supply reduction initiatives were reasonably well integrated and mandatory drug testing (MDT) adequately managed. The average positive random MDT rate for the previous 10 months was 9.2% against a target of 9%. Prisoners were referred appropriately to the counselling, assessment, referral, advice and throughcare service (CARATs). The MDT suites were appropriately equipped, but the one on the LDU was small and a poor environment with no waiting area. Six dogs had been trained to detect a combination of drugs, alcohol and mobile telephones.

- 1.56 The security committee was reasonably well attended and supported by a comprehensive intelligence report. Appropriate security objectives were set and monitored.
- 1.57 While most security arrangements were proportionate, it was unnecessary that all prisoners were strip searched on reception, on entry to the segregation unit and 10% at the end of visits, regardless of any intelligence to support this.

Recommendations

- 1.58 Strip searching of prisoners should only be intelligence-led or based on specific suspicion.
- 1.59 Drug testing facilities on the local discharge unit should be improved and should include a holding area.
- 1.60 Action decided in response to security information, especially information indicating the need for a drug test on the basis of suspicion, should be tracked and monitored to ensure it is carried through. (Repeated recommendation 7.11)

Incentives and earned privileges<sup>4</sup>

Expected outcomes:

Prisoners understand the purpose of the incentives and earned privileges (IEP) scheme and how to progress through it. The IEP scheme provides prisoners with incentives and rewards for effort and behaviour. The scheme is applied fairly, transparently and consistently.

- 1.61 The incentives and earned privileges scheme was poorly perceived by prisoners and needed review. Prisoners on the basic regime were managed appropriately.
- 1.62 The incentives and earned privileges (IEP) scheme was administered thoroughly and backed by a quality assurance process. However, the policy document was unclear, with no statement of entitlement for each level. Prisoners told us that there was little advantage to being enhanced.
- 1.63 In our survey, only 37% of respondents, against the comparator of 49%, felt that they were treated fairly by the IEP scheme. Notices threatening immediate downgrade to the basic regime for relatively trivial rule infringements were inappropriate, and contributed to the perception that the IEP system was unfair.

HMP Norwich

26

- 1.64 A prisoner was required to show 12 weeks good behaviour to qualify for enhanced, but most waited longer because review dates were based on cell location rather than length of stay. This was too long in a local prison, particularly one holding young adults.
- 1.65 The behaviour of men on the basic regime was reviewed weekly at a case management meeting, to which the prisoner was invited.

Recommendations

- 1.66 Reduction in IEP level should not be threatened or carried out on the basis of a single action, unless it meets criteria of seriousness clearly stated in the policy. (Repeated recommendation 7.57)
- 1.67 Prisoners on the standard level should be able to apply for the enhanced level sooner than 12 weeks after their arrival. (Repeated recommendation 7.62)

Discipline

Expected outcomes:

Disciplinary procedures are applied fairly and for good reason. Prisoners understand why they are being disciplined and can appeal against any sanctions imposed on them.

1.68 Use of formal disciplinary procedures was high. Records of hearings were generally well completed but quality assurance required development. The use of force was high and its governance weak, and use of special accommodation concerning and not always necessary. Throughput of the segregation unit was high. The unit was adequate but the regime was poor and often inconsistent.

Disciplinary procedures

- 1.69 Between July and December 2011, there had been 942 adjudications, which was high. Some cases could have been dealt with less formally. Adjudications were held in a suitable room. Prisoners were given sufficient time and information to prepare for their hearings, and received legal advice when requested. Records were mostly of a good standard but a small minority did not demonstrate sufficient enquiry before a finding of guilt. Punishments were broadly fair. Quality assurance procedures were not robust enough.
- 1.70 Despite the collation of a significant amount of information on adjudications that informed the reasonably well-attended quarterly adjudication and segregation meeting, there was limited analysis of data for trends or patterns.

Recommendations

1.71 All disciplinary charges should be fully investigated with clear reasons given for the decisions reached, and the quality assurance of adjudication records should be improved.

27

1.72 Information collated for all disciplinary procedures, including use of force and segregation, should be analysed and used more effectively.

The use of force

- 1.73 Recorded use of force remained high. However, some incidents were low level and many appeared to be de-escalated appropriately. Handcuffs were not routinely applied.
- 1.74 Documentation following use of force was generally well completed, but quality checking was insufficient. Planned interventions were not effectively recorded on film and were not reviewed.
- 1.75 Batons had been drawn or used on six occasions in 2011. Most use appeared justified and, although not routine, there was some additional scrutiny where there were concerns.
- 1.76 Use of special accommodation was very high with 36 recorded uses in 2011, and further evidence that it had been used on other occasions without adequate record. We were not assured that all uses were justified or necessary, and many prisoners spent excessive periods there. Two-thirds of prisoners had their clothing removed and replaced with anti-tear gowns, and about half of those located there were on ACCT documents, which was inappropriate.
- 1.77 There was no specific use of force committee. Although comprehensive information about use of force was collected, it was not well used to inform any meaningful trend or pattern analysis (see recommendation 1.72). Governance of use of force was weak and required improvement (see main recommendation HP58).

Segregation unit

- 1.78 Although still high, at 127 cases between July and December 2011, use of segregation was lower than at the last inspection and notably so for young adults. Comprehensive data on segregation was collated but was not used in any meaningful way (see recommendation 1.72). There had been some work to understand the high number of black and minority ethnic prisoners in segregation.
- 1.79 Communal areas were clean, but the unit was worn and many cells had graffiti and dirty, scaled toilets. The large exercise yard was stark. Special accommodation cells were grim.
- 1.80 Strip searching of new arrivals appeared routine and sometimes in the absence of appropriate risk assessment (see recommendation 1.58). Too many prisoners on ACCT documents were held in segregation with no justification of the exceptional circumstances to warrant this, and the prison was unfocused on this concern (see main recommendation HP58).
- 1.81 The regime in the unit was poor and often applied inconsistently. Daily access to showers, telephones and exercise were often curtailed. Other than a small library trolley, there was no purposeful activity to engage prisoners.
- 1.82 Multidisciplinary reviews took place as required but resulting documentation was often poorly completed and behaviour targets were too often perfunctory. Care or reintegration plans for the few longer term prisoners required development.
- 1.83 Relationships between staff and prisoners in the unit were reasonable. Although unlocking protocols had been relaxed since the last inspection, they remained risk averse and excessive at times. Constructive engagement was not reflected in staff entries in the daily history sheets or case notes.

Recommendations

- 1.84 The environment and regime in the segregation unit should be improved.
- 1.85 The unlock levels in the segregation unit should be decided through a clear and proportionate assessment based on the individual prisoner's evidenced risk. (Repeated recommendation 7.44)
- 1.86 Segregation review documentation and care/reintegration plans should be completed thoroughly, include meaningful targets and daily history sheets should better reflect constructive engagement between staff and prisoners.

Substance misuse

Expected outcomes:

Prisoners with drug and/or alcohol problems are identified at reception and receive effective treatment and support throughout their stay in custody.

- 1.87 There was a draft alcohol and drug strategy. Counselling, assessment, referral, advice and throughcare (CARAT) services were well managed, as were clinical services, although staff shortages had affected their integration. The building skills for recovery programme had received a very positive audit, and prisoners considered that drug services were good. Compact-based drug testing procedures were not consistent. Prisoners had no access to peer support groups.
- 1.88 Prisoners who required integrated drug treatment (IDTS) were located on A wing. Clinical and psychosocial services delivered a good standard of care and were appreciated by prisoners but, until recently, had lacked integration and joint working. Drug services were provided by Phoenix Futures at the time of the inspection, but were being retendered to a new provider. Clinical services were provided by Serco Health and Norfolk Community Health and Care NHS Trust. In our survey, 81% of respondents said that the support they had received for their drug and alcohol problems was helpful. We received positive comments from prisoners, with most verbal complaints about access to primary care health services.
- 1.89 The drug strategy was being updated in a combined drug and alcohol strategy, but the annual developmental objectives or action plan was yet to be completed. We observed good leadership from the newly appointed clinical lead and CARAT manager. There had been a CARATs needs assessment and there was an A wing integrated drug treatment system (IDTS) clinical action plan. There were currently no joint action plans to enhance integration. A wide range of clinical protocols and associated policies and procedures were being updated.
- 1.90 Opiate-dependent prisoners had prompt access to clinical support, first night prescribing and comprehensive assessment on weekdays, but there were problems in accessing medical cover and prompt prescribing for prisoners admitted over the weekend. Staffing of the clinical substance misuse service had improved and there were initiatives to provide more wing-based services, including access to primary care nursing and medical services. Dual diagnosis services were being developed. Joint working had improved and clinical and CARAT teams worked in a more integrated way than previously. There were 13-week reviews of progress but five- and 14-day reviews were not yet conducted. There were plans for greater joint working with groups.

- 1.91 The performance of the CARAT service has improved since the last inspection. All referred prisoners, including those with primary alcohol problems, were seen promptly. There were 313 prisoners on the active caseload, with 70 waiting to be seen and 60 triaged or suspended. There were 43 young adult clients. The CARAT manager monitored targets well. Prisoners had access to one-to-one work and the full range of IDTS modules. Primary problem alcohol users could undertake the Norwich alcohol programme and the A2Z programme. However, in our survey only 42% of respondents said they had received help or support for their alcohol problem, against the comparator of 56%.
- 1.92 The building skills for recovery programme was being piloted, with additional sessions tailored to prisoner need. The programme had received very positive audit feedback for the past two years. Prisoners were currently unable to access Alcoholics Anonymous (AA), Gambling Anonymous (GA) and Narcotics Anonymous (NA) groups.
- 1.93 There were 300 drug testing compacts, with a clear distinction between voluntary and incentive-based compacts. However, prisoners were not always supervised during urine testing. Not all the testing rooms were suitably clean, and the toilet in the A wing testing area was broken.

Recommendations

- 1.94 The drug and alcohol strategy should contain an action plan for all key aspects of drug services, and there should be action to improve integrated working between services.
- 1.95 Opiate-dependent users should have prompt access to medical services at weekends.
- 1.96 All compact-based drug sampling should be undertaken under supervision, and testing facilities should be clean and compliant with infection control procedures.

Housekeeping point

1.97 Prisoners should have access to Alcoholics Anonymous, Narcotics Anonymous and Gambling Anonymous services.

Section 2: Respect

The reference numbers at the end of some recommendations indicate that that they are repeated, and provide the paragraph location of the previous recommendation in the last report.

Residential units

Expected outcomes:

Prisoners live in a safe, clean and decent environment within which they are encouraged to take personal responsibility for themselves and their possessions. Prisoners are aware of the rules and routines of the prison which encourage responsible behaviour.

- 2.1 The quality of cells varied significantly across the site, but many were poor and some areas were not sufficiently clean. Toilets in double cells were inadequately screened. Staff response times to cell bells were poor. The application system was not quality assured.
- 2.2 The condition of accommodation varied greatly. Many cells on B and C wings were in a poor state of repair, and this was also evident on the local discharge unit (F and G wings). Makeshift curtains and screens were commonplace, and some furniture was damaged. There were no lockable lockers. Many doubled cells could not hold two sets of furniture and were inappropriate for two prisoners. The dormitories on E wing were poor and unsuitable for the number of occupants. Accommodation on A and M wings was better, and while Britannia House was old, the accommodation was in a good state of repair.
- 2.3 The condition of showers, laundries, toilets and sluice areas across the prison was frequently poor, with accumulated dirt, mould and litter. Cell toilets were stained and inadequately screened. There was a new washing machine on E wing but no dryer. Outside areas were generally litter-free.
- Our survey and observations indicated that, as at the previous inspection, some prisoners, particularly on the reception site, were unable to shower each day.
- 2.5 The safer custody team made a monthly survey of response times to cell call bells, mostly on A wing. This showed some alarming delays, confirming the poor responses in our survey, particularly from younger respondents and those with disabilities. Although the monitoring process was encouraging, there was no evidence of an improvement in performance in the six months of data we reviewed.
- 2.6 Association facilities across the site were reasonable, although access was restricted during domestic periods.
- 2.7 In our survey, 67% of respondents, against the comparator of 82%, said they did not always receive clean sheets every week, with even poorer responses from black and minority ethnic prisoners. There were some written and verbal complaints about kit change, which was also raised in our group discussions. In general, the quality of kit was satisfactory, although larger sizes were in short supply. Unconvicted and enhanced prisoners were allowed to wear their own clothes.

- 2.8 In our survey, 62% of respondents, against the comparator of 56%, felt that applications were dealt with fairly, but they were much less positive about response times. Younger and disabled prisoners reported particular difficulties but vulnerable prisoners were more positive. The process was not quality assured, and a tracking system had been developed but not yet implemented. Notice boards were generally up to date and informative, but there was limited material in foreign languages.
- 2.9 Although prisoners complained of delays in receiving their post, the bulk of mail was processed on the day of arrival. The number of telephones was generally appropriate, but the limited unlock regime restricted access for workers on some days. On F and G wings, some telephones lacked privacy, and there were not enough telephones.
- 2.10 In our survey, respondents, particularly vulnerable prisoners, said that they had difficulty accessing their stored property. We observed property applications being processed and the reception staff said that there were no current delays.

Recommendations

- 2.11 Cells and other prisoner areas should be clean and in a good state of repair.
- 2.12 Cell call bells should be responded to promptly.
- 2.13 Toilets in shared cells should be appropriately screened or separated. (Repeated recommendation 2.17)
- 2.14 All prisoners should be able to shower every day. (Repeated recommendation 2.23)
- 2.15 Applications should be dealt with promptly and wing managers should carry out random quality checks monthly. (Repeated recommendation 3.47)
- 2.16 Telephones on F and G wings should be private, with one telephone per 20 prisoners when wings are unlocked.

Housekeeping point

2.17 All prisoners should receive a full kit change every week.

Staff-prisoner relationships

Expected outcomes:

Prisoners are treated with respect by staff throughout the duration of their time in custody, and are encouraged to take responsibility for their own actions and decisions.

2.18 The quality of staff-prisoner relationships was varied Most prisoners said that staff treated them with respect, although minority groups had poorer perceptions and our own observations were mixed. Staff case history notes indicated a balanced understanding of individual custodial behaviour, and preferred names were often used. Many prisoners were unaware of their personal officer but for those who did the scheme provided a reasonable service.

- 2.19 Prisoners gave conflicting views of their relationship with staff some described them as disinterested and others as engaged. We observed some dismissive staff, although we also saw staff interacting well with prisoners. During association, we observed staff who were distant and not engaged with prisoners.
- 2.20 In our survey, 81% of respondents, against the comparator of 70%, said that most staff treated them with respect, and 77%, against the comparator of 71%, said that there was a member of staff they could turn to if they had a problem. Black and minority ethnic, foreign national and young adult respondents were less favourable, and the prison was not focused on the reasons for such perceptions.
- 2.21 Relationships on the vulnerable prisoner wings were reasonable. In our survey, 89% of vulnerable prisoner respondents said that staff treated them with respect, and 100% said that there was a member of staff that they could turn to.
- 2.22 Entries in electronic case history notes indicated that staff were aware of prisoners' needs and encouraged them to take responsibility for their actions. Prison staff we spoke to had a good understanding of individual prisoner's custodial behaviour, but were less focused on their resettlement needs. Prisoners were consulted through well-attended and meaningful wing forums.
- 2.23 In our survey, only 41% of respondents, against the comparator of 46%, said they had a personal officer, but of those with a personal officer, 73% said that they were helpful, which was better than the comparator and the previous inspection. Many prisoners in the reception prison were unaware of who their personal officer was, but prisoners in the local discharge unit and Britannia House were more responsive.

Recommendations

- 2.24 The prison should analyse the reason for poorer perceptions of staff-prisoner relationships among young adults and black and minority ethnic prisoners, and on particular wings, and take appropriate steps. (Repeated recommendation 2.30)
- 2.25 The personal officer scheme should be fully implemented. (Repeated recommendation 2.34)

Equality and diversity

Expected outcomes:

The prison demonstrates a clear and coordinated approach to eliminating discrimination, promoting equitable outcomes and fostering good relations, and ensures that no prisoner is unfairly disadvantaged. This is underpinned by effective processes to identify and resolve any inequality. The distinct needs of each protected characteristic are recognised and addressed: these include race equality, nationality, religion, disability (including mental, physical and learning disabilities and difficulties), gender, transgender issues, sexual orientation and age.

2.26 Provision for diversity had improved but some areas required further development. The equality action team only monitored race. The investigation of diversity complaints was good, although there had been no recent independent checks. Trained prisoner equality representatives provided valuable support to other prisoners, but there were no support groups for prisoners from minority groups. We observed reasonable relationships between black and minority ethnic prisoners and staff. There was little formal support for Gypsies and Travellers. There was a clear foreign national prisoner policy and good provision of translated material and telephone interpreting services. There was a high number of immigration detainees held beyond the end of their sentences. Prisoners with disabilities were identified on reception and evacuation plans agreed where required, but there were few physical adaptations. Provision for older prisoners was good on L wing but required further development elsewhere. The older prisoners group was well attended. Provision for gay, bisexual or transgender prisoners was underdeveloped.

Strategic management

- 2.27 Attention to diversity had improved since our last inspection. The equality policy covered all aspects of diversity, and there were separate policies relating to older, young and foreign national prisoners. An internal equality website provided significant information for all staff. A recent equality fair had enabled many prisoners to access organisations providing information and advice about equality issues. Provision for gay, bisexual and transgender prisoners, older prisoners and those with disabilities required further development, and some services were stretched.
- 2.28 The equality action team met monthly but its monitoring of diversity was limited to race equality. No external community groups were represented.
- 2.29 There had been 67 discrimination incident report forms (DIRFs) submitted in the previous eight months. They had been well investigated by wing managers and showed that action had been taken to address racist and other discriminatory behaviour. The equality officer carried out quality assurance. External scrutiny from Norfolk and Norwich Race Equality Council had lapsed since August 2011. Equality impact assessments were completed and reviewed according to priority.
- 2.30 A group of prisoner equality representatives had been trained in a wide range of equality and other prison matters. They provided a valuable service to prisoners, particularly during induction, and said that they felt valued and supported. There were no support or consultation groups or forums for any minority groups apart from older prisoners.

Recommendation

2.31 Provision under all areas of diversity, including disability, older prisoners and sexual orientation, should be fully developed and all aspects of diversity should be monitored.

Protected characteristics

2.32 Race equality was managed on a day-to-day basis by the equality officer. Black and minority ethnic prisoners accounted for about a fifth of the prisoner population. In our survey, they were negative about feeling safe and respectful treatment by staff, but those we spoke to in groups and individually were generally positive about staff and told us that they felt safe. We observed reasonable relationships between staff and black and minority ethnic prisoners, and the prisoner equality representatives provided good support. Few displays promoted different cultures or race.

- 2.33 The equality action team considered ethnic monitoring across a broad range of areas, and we found good investigation of areas that had been out of range, such as adjudications and segregation, and measures put in place to address identified issues. This was further supported by the completion and review of equality impact assessments, with their recommendations included in the equality action plan.
- 2.34 Our survey showed that 6% of respondents identified as being from a Gypsy, Romany or Traveller background but there was little formal support for this group, although a Traveller prisoner representative had recently been appointed.
- 2.35 There were 80 foreign national prisoners at the time of our inspection, 15 of whom were immigration detainees held beyond the end of their sentence. The foreign national policy clearly outlined provision at Norwich and had been translated into several languages. Other translated material, such as phrase books, the prisoner handbook and induction information, were given to new arrivals by the prisoner representatives. Telephone interpreting services were used more frequently than we usually see, especially in reception, induction and health care.
- 2.36 The foreign national coordinator and two trained foreign national clerks liaised regularly with the UK Border Agency (UKBA). The coordinator was not trained but provided a good service within limited time. The team had set up valuable links with the local enforcement office, which had agreed to provide an advice surgery and actively dealt with detainees' cases and progressed them with the criminal case division. Head office UKBA staff attended the prison once a month to see prisoners. There was clear evidence that prisoners' monthly updates were meaningful.
- 2.37 Some immigration detainees waited long periods for transfer to immigration removal centres (IRCs), with one over 18 months beyond the end of his sentence. The coordinator and clerks made significant efforts to have detainees transferred. This was evidenced by the transfer of six detainees to an IRC during our inspection.
- 2.38 There was some monitoring of the prisoner population by religion, particularly in DIRFs and access to religious services, but little else. There was no staff training on religious awareness and no interventions to challenge religious discrimination.
- 2.39 The disability liaison officer (DLO) identified all prisoners who reported a disability on their arrival or during their stay at Norwich. She had a comprehensive database that was available to all staff. Tribal staff assessed prisoners with educational needs and health care staff those with medical needs. The DLO was not able to meet all prisoners with disabilities and so not all had care plans. Personal emergency and evacuation plans had been developed for those who needed them, and staff on all wings could easily identify those who required assistance in an emergency.
- 2.40 There were two specifically adapted cells on A wing, although the lowered light switches by the beds did not work. Prisoners on L wing were provided with appropriate aids and had care plans. Some telephones had been lowered on B and C wings and one prisoner had a bell in his cell to call staff in an emergency. Beyond this, few other adaptations or appliances had been provided. The DLO had recently started to provide an advocacy service during adjudications to prisoners with learning difficulties. There was no paid carer scheme.
- 2.41 Prisoners with disabilities who were unemployed were not always unlocked during the core day. Some were not paid the full disability rate of pay if they accessed some activities, leaving them worse off financially than if they did nothing.

- 2.42 Older prisoners resident on L wing were well provided for, but those on other wings had less support. Prisoners aged 50 or over could attend a weekly 'out and about' group run by Age UK, but attendees were not paid, which was inappropriate. Age UK also provided an advice and support service on finance and accommodation and brought in specialist volunteers when required, and also followed up prisoners on release to evaluate their accommodation and financial circumstances. Additional regime provision included over-50s gym sessions.
- 2.43 The equality strategy did not contain information about internal and external support for prisoners who were gay or transgender. Advice and support had been provided to some prisoners but provision generally required development. Prisoners could not confidentially report that they were gay, bisexual or transgender, and equality staff had no statistics on these prisoners.

Recommendations

- 2.44 The prison should investigate the poor perceptions of black and minority ethnic prisoners in our survey.
- 2.45 NOMS should continue to work with the UK Border Agency to ensure that prisoners held solely under immigration powers are transferred to an immigration removal centre on completion of their sentence.
- 2.46 There should be a formal carer/mentor scheme for prisoners with disabilities and older prisoners who require assistance.
- 2.47 Prisoners unfit for work due to a disability should be unlocked during the day and provided with appropriate regime activities and equitable pay.
- 2.48 Gay, bisexual and transgender prisoners should be provided with information on the internal and external support available.

Housekeeping point

2.49 The prison should provide displays that reflect the cultural and racial mix in the prison.

Faith and religious activity

Expected outcomes:

All prisoners are able to practise their religion fully and in safety. The chaplaincy plays a full part in prison life and contributes to prisoners' overall care, support and resettlement.

2.50 A fully integrated chaplaincy played an active role in the prison and provided pastoral and worship support for all faiths. Faith facilities were adequate for the population, but prisoners with mobility problems could not easily access the main chapel. Prisoners were favourable about their access to faith leaders, although were less positive about respect for their religious beliefs. There was a good range of religious study groups and other provision, but some clashed with other activities.

- 2.51 The recently increased chaplaincy had a well-publicised programme. The team worked well together to cover generic pastoral duties, and there was provision for all faiths across the prison.
- 2.52 Faith facilities were adequate for the prisoner population. The multi-faith rooms were used for some activities and for Muslim prayers. Prisoners with restricted mobility could not easily access the main chapel on the reception site as it was upstairs. Those in segregation did not often attend corporate worship, and chaplaincy staff were not included in review boards to assess individual risk.
- 2.53 The chaplaincy provided a range of activities, such as prayer and discussion groups, although some of these clashed with other activities and not all prisoners could attend them.
- 2.54 The chaplaincy was integrated into the daily life of the prison and represented at key meetings. Chaplains made daily visits to the segregation unit and attended ACCT reviews. The team visited all new arrivals and was closely involved in providing family support following any death in custody and supporting prisoners following periods of illness and palliative care. There was a formal prison visitors scheme for prisoners who did not receive visits. A large number of volunteers worked with the chaplaincy, and prisoners were advised of local faith organisations on release.
- 2.55 In our survey, respondents, particularly black and minority ethnic prisoners, were favourable about their access to faith leaders but were generally less positive about their religious beliefs being respected (see also recommendation 2.44).

Recommendations

- 2.56 Prisoners with mobility problems should be able to participate in corporate worship. (Repeated recommendation 3.83)
- 2.57 Chaplains should be involved in reviews of prisoners in the segregation unit to assess their suitability to attend corporate worship.

Complaints

Expected outcomes:

Effective complaints procedures are in place for prisoners, which are easy to access, easy to use and provide timely responses. Prisoners feel safe from repercussions when using these procedures and are aware of an appeal procedure.

- 2.58 Complaints were managed efficiently, there was reasonably effective quality assurance and responses were generally appropriate.
- 2.59 Complaint forms were freely accessible and information on complaints was available in a variety of languages. Between July and December 2011, only 661 complaints were submitted, which was low. The responses to complaints that we sampled were normally personally addressed, polite, timely and answered the issues raised. Quality assurance measures were good.

Legal rights

Expected outcomes:

Prisoners are fully aware of, and understand their sentence or remand, both on arrival and release. Prisoners are supported by the prison staff to freely exercise their legal rights.

- 2.60 Legal services remained poor, apart from the addition of fax machines on wings to facilitate contact with legal representatives.
- 2.61 There were still no trained legal services officers. Bail information services were delivered through the offender management unit (OMU), although provision was inconsistent and often poor. This was reflected in our survey.
- 2.62 There was limited information for prisoners and staff were generally unable to offer any advice or signposting to services. However, the introduction of fax machines on the wings to allow prisoners to communicate with their legal representatives was a positive initiative. Adequate legal reference materials were available in the library but were not widely publicised.
- 2.63 In our survey, only 50% of respondents, against the comparator of 59%, said it was easy to attend legal visits, although the provision did not appear to be oversubscribed.

Recommendation

2.64 Legal services should be sufficient to meet the needs of prisoners.

Good practice

2.65 Fax machines had been installed on residential wings to help prisoners contact their legal representatives.

Health services

Expected outcomes:

Prisoners are cared for by a health service that assesses and meets their health needs while in prison and which promotes continuity of health and social care on release. The standard of health service provided is equivalent to that which prisoners could expect to receive elsewhere in the community.

2.66 Prisoners were dissatisfied with some aspects of health care, particularly the appointments system, although health services had improved since our last inspection. Service commissioning and provider arrangements were overly complex and in transition. The standard of clinical facilities and treatment rooms ranged from high to very poor. There was a reasonable range of primary care clinics and opportunities for the care of lifelong conditions, but no routine screening for learning disability. Waiting times for appointments were short but non-attendance rates were too high. Pharmacy and dental services were generally good. The inpatient unit and older prisoner unit offered good standards of care but in dated, and often, very poor environments. Mental health services were much improved but primary mental health care was underdeveloped.

Governance arrangements

- 2.67 Prisoners told us of their dissatisfaction with some aspects of health care, particularly the appointments system, although services had improved since our last inspection. In our survey, vulnerable prisoners had poorer views of the health services, although we did not observe any discrimination.
- 2.68 Health services were informed by an up-to-date health needs assessment, and there was an effective partnership board and a focused prison health development plan. NHS Norfolk and Waveney commissioned Serco to provide primary health services. Serco directly supplied some services but subcontracted to two other providers for others. Secondary mental health services were provided by Partnerships in Care. The arrangements were needlessly complex and this situation was being addressed.
- 2.69 Clinical governance arrangements were robust. A governance group met regularly and received a variety of detailed reports about trends, complaints and incidents. The prison health performance and quality indicators were used to assess progress. There was feedback from the patients' forum.
- 2.70 Staffing had improved since our last visit with an increase in registered mental health nurses (RMNs). Full-time GPs had been appointed with only one locum remaining. Registration checking of health care professionals was up to date, and training and clinical supervision were offered as appropriate and recorded.
- 2.71 Staff had good access to evidence-base sources and care planning was based on National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) guidance. Clinical audit was in line with the provider's schedule and included monthly sampling of clinical records. There was an extensive range of policy and procedural guidance, including policies for infection control, communicable disease management and information sharing.
- 2.72 There were health centres on the reception and local discharge unit (LDU) sites, treatment rooms on several wings, a day care centre on the reception site, and an inpatient unit and older prisoner residential unit on the LDU site. Waiting rooms in the health centre were stark with wooden benches. Cells in the inpatient unit had been decorated since our last visit. However, the inpatient and older prisoner units looked worn and dated. Some inpatient cells were quite poor. Most clinical rooms were adequate, although some work surfaces did not comply with infection control standards. E wing treatment room required complete refurbishment. Cleanliness was good and there were regular cleaning schedules. The day care centre was an exceptional resource that was very underused.
- 2.73 Resuscitation equipment, including automated external defibrillators, was sited strategically around the prison and checked regularly. Daily living and mobility aids were available to patients. A senior nurse was responsible for ensuring appropriate care for older prisoners 89 prisoners were over 50 at the time of our visit.
- 2.74 An information leaflet for new arrivals was well laid out but had no pictorial element and could have been difficult for prisoners with poor literacy. It was available in foreign languages on request.

- 2.75 Health care received an average of six complaints a week, mostly on medication prescribing and supply. The responses we sampled were timely and offered apologies where appropriate.
- 2.76 Wing based Well Man Clinics were run by gym staff and health trainers (prisoners). There had been three successful multiagency health promotion events in 2011.

Recommendation

2.77 All clinical rooms should comply with current infection control standards.

Housekeeping points

- 2.78 Health care waiting rooms should have more comfortable seating.
- 2.79 All cells in the inpatient facility should be kept clean and, where needed, refurbished.
- 2.80 Health care information material should be accessible to prisoners with poor literacy.
- 2.81 Primary health care and health promotion information should be available in the health waiting rooms.

Delivery of care (physical health)

- 2.82 All new arrivals received a comprehensive health screen. The needs analysis suggested that not all prisoners with mental health problems were detected at this stage, despite the use of the relevant assessment. New arrivals were offered a secondary screen within three days, although 30% had failed to attend. Prisoners were followed up and offered subsequent appointments. Screening for learning disability was available but not routinely used. An admission pack checklist was used to ensure that the GP had been contacted, information sharing consent gained and other appropriate action taken.
- Applications for health care appointments had pictorial elements to assist those with reading difficulties. There had been a sluggish response to applications recently and so prisoners had a poor view of the system. When we tested it, we did not receive an acknowledgement of our application within 48 hours (compared with a test complaint we posted that was acknowledged within 24 hours). Wing-based health care staff were due to be in place by May 2012, and this would address the problem by allowing prisoners daily access to nurses to make appointments.
- 2.84 There was a reasonable range of primary care clinics, including nurse practitioner clinics. There was a weekly clinic for patients with lifelong conditions, and care plans were used on SystmOne (the electronic patient record), although not all had been reviewed at the set time. The waiting time to see a GP was two days or less, which was good, and GPs were available every day except Sunday. The failure to attend rate for all clinics was high at 12%, although this was a decrease from 50% in mid-2011. At least two nurses were on site at all times, so use of the out of hours medical services was infrequent.
- 2.85 There was an extensive range of clinics to assist patients with blood borne virus testing and care, including those run by visiting hospital specialists. Young adult prisoners had access to

- chlamydia testing and meningitis C vaccine (although no vaccine had been used in the past year).
- 2.86 SystmOne was used and medical record systems complied with the Data Protection Act. However, we discovered some medical records and X-rays in two decommissioned rooms, which breached patient confidentiality.
- 2.87 The inpatient unit had 23 beds, which were on the certified normal accommodation (CNA), and prisoners without clinical need sometimes occupied beds. Agreed plans to remove 10 beds from the CNA for sole clinical use had not yet been implemented. Despite the often poor environment, inpatients had good standards of individual care, although there was no evening association or timetabled educational support (see recommendations 3.4 and 3.13).
- 2.88 The 15-bed older prisoner unit had changed its function since our last inspection and was now used by prisoners from Norfolk and Suffolk only. The standard of care was good.
- 2.89 Prisoners had good access to secondary health care services at NHS facilities in Norwich, including treatment for hepatitis C. Fewer than one in 70 appointments were cancelled for security reasons.

Recommendation

2.90 Clinical records should be stored in compliance with the Data Protection Act and used in accordance with the Caldicott principles on the use and confidentiality of personal health information.

Housekeeping point

2.91 The non-uptake of meningitis C vaccine should be subject to clinical audit.

Pharmacy

- 2.92 There was a full-time pharmacist, and prisoners had direct access to pharmacy technicians who administered medicines. There was an in-possession policy and risk assessment, and 35% of prisoners had medicines in possession. There were out of hours arrangements, although these were not covered in a policy or protocol.
- 2.93 We found a case where medication did not appear to have been administered in accordance with the prescriber's instructions; an investigation into this commenced immediately. There were standard operating procedures, although the special sick policy had not been reviewed since March 2009. There was a local prescribing formulary, which appeared to be used. Pharmacy staff where unaware of the prison's patient group directions (PGDs).
- 2.94 Systems for handling medicines safely and securely and stock management had improved but we found some loose tablets in medicine cupboards in B2 and E wings. The routine use of Henley bags had been phased out but we found some bags containing medication dated 2009 on E wing. Reference books in some treatment rooms were significantly out of date. Refrigerator temperatures were regularly monitored but no action had been taken when they were outside the acceptable range.

Housekeeping points

- 2.95 The medicines and therapeutics committee should formally adopt an out of hours policy, regularly review the special sick policy to ensure that all appropriate medicines can be supplied, and ensure that all pharmacy staff are aware of all policies and procedures related to medicines prescribing, management and administration.
- 2.96 Medication should be stored in an orderly manner, and pharmacy staff should visit the treatment areas frequently to check and remove out-of-date stock and incorrectly prepared or labelled items.
- 2.97 Out-of-date pharmacy reference books should be discarded and replaced by the current editions.
- 2.98 Maximum and minimum drug fridge temperatures should be recorded daily to ensure that heatsensitive items are stored within the 2-8°C range. Corrective action should be taken if necessary, and this should be monitored by pharmacy staff.

Dentistry

- 2.99 The dental service was equivalent to that in the community. Although prisoners complained about access to the dentist, waiting lists were short and the average wait for routine treatment was five weeks. Prisoners with dental pain were seen within a few days. Dental sessions were held on both the reception and LDU sites, and a dentist or therapist was available as required. Prisoners could not follow oral health promotion advice as they were not permitted access to dental floss or inter-dental brushes.
- 2.100 The surgeries were of a good standard but neither had decontamination facilities. Both were due to be modernised and brought up to standard. We were told that the primary care trust had audited the service in the last year.

Housekeeping point

2.101 Prisoners should be permitted to have clinically advised dental health products in possession.

Delivery of care (mental health)

- 2.102 Mental health services had much improved with a revised stepped offender mental health pathway, which clarified roles and increased staffing. Over a third of uniformed officers have been trained in mental health awareness in the last year, which was a high figure.
- 2.103 Primary mental health care remained insufficiently developed, although improvements were in hand. A new primary mental team had been formed and RMNs had been recruited to offer wing-based services. Guided self-help, counselling and one-to-one solution-based approaches were available to patients, but there was no group support, group therapy or extended therapeutic day capacity. We saw no therapeutic activity in the day care centre. More integrated primary and secondary mental health services were due to be offered, with inputs from the community IAPT (improving access to psychological therapies) team in the day care centre from April 2012.

2.104 Secondary mental health services were provided by Partnerships in Care, and there were good links with primary mental health through weekly multidisciplinary and multi-departmental meetings to consider referrals and treatment strategies. Patient care was informed by a consultant forensic psychiatrist and a clinical psychologist, and delivered by experienced forensic nurses. The care programme approach (CPA) was used effectively to ensure continuity of care for patients. A quarter of Mental Health Act transfers were not completed within target, although local transfers were usually efficient.

Recommendation

2.105 Group support, group therapy or therapeutic day services should be available to prisoners who need additional support for emotional, behavioural and common mental health problems, and the day care centre should be fully used for therapeutic purposes.

Catering

Expected outcomes:

Prisoners are offered varied meals to meet their individual requirements and food is prepared and served according to religious, cultural and prevailing food safety and hygiene regulations.

- 2.106 The range and standard of food were reasonable, although unpopular with prisoners. Breakfast packs were issued to prisoners the previous evening. Prisoners could not dine out of their cells. Kitchens were worn and grubby, and some hotplates were not clean.
- 2.107 The quality of food we tasted was reasonable and of the correct temperature, and menus generally met the needs of different diets, including vegetarian, vegan, and halal. Halal food was stored and served separately from other foods. Despite this, prisoners continued to be negative about the food, and in our survey, only 22% of respondents said it was good.
- 2.108 Prisoners selected lunch and dinner from a four-week rolling menu that offered a reasonable variety of healthy options, and daily portions of fruit and vegetables. A light lunch of sandwiches or soup was offered every day and, although adequate, it would have been reasonable to offer prisoners both. Meal times were adequately spaced, but breakfast packs were issued to prisoners in the evening. Prisoners were currently unable to eat their meals out of their cells, although this option was due to be introduced.
- 2.109 The kitchens in the reception site and the LDU were old and worn, flooring needed repair and many areas were grubby. On E wing, food was served in the middle of the landing from an old and dirty bain-marie, and serving utensils were washed after use in a small sink in the landing toilet. The catering manager or a member of her team carried out and recorded regular checks of serveries during meal times.
- 2.110 All staff and prisoners employed in the preparation and serving of food had received basic hygiene and food handling training. As at the previous inspection, prisoners working in the kitchen were not able to gain national vocational qualifications (NVQs).
- 2.111 There was a regular meeting with servery workers, a twice yearly food survey and prisoner representatives met the catering manager at formal consultation meetings. There were food comments books on all residential units, which were readily accessible to prisoners.

Recommendations

- 2.112 The main kitchens and wing serveries, including the provision for serving meals and washing utensils on E wing, should be clean and functional.
- 2.113 Breakfast packs should be issued on the day they are to be eaten. (Repeated recommendation 8.18)
- 2.114 Prisoners should be offered the opportunity to dine out of cell. (Repeated recommendation 8.20)

Purchases

Expected outcomes:

Prisoners can purchase a suitable range of goods at reasonable prices to meet their diverse needs, and can do so safely.

- 2.115 The standard shop contract operated satisfactorily, and a reasonable range of goods was available, but some new arrivals had to wait over a week for their first order.
- 2.116 In our survey, respondents said that the range of goods available in the prison shop was reasonable. The standard DHL prison shop contract generally worked well, but the shop list was only available in English. Prison staff delivered orders to prisoners at their cell doors.
- 2.117 Some new arrivals had to wait up to 13 days for their first order, although they had the opportunity to buy multiple reception packs. An advance of earnings was available to prisoners who could not afford to buy packs.
- 2.118 The system for making orders (including hobby items) from catalogues was well used, and free. However, prisoners reported that there were often considerable delays and communication issues, although there were plans to issue a spreadsheet to wing staff to track the progress of their orders.
- 2.119 Consultation about the shop through the prisoner forum was becoming more meaningful.

Recommendation

2.120 All prisoners, including new arrivals, should have weekly access to the prison shop.

Housekeeping point

2.121 The prison should progress its plans for wing staff to track the progress of prisoner catalogue purchases.

Section 3: Purposeful activity

The reference numbers at the end of some recommendations indicate that that they are repeated, and provide the paragraph location of the previous recommendation in the last report.

Time out of cell

Expected outcomes:

All prisoners are actively encouraged to engage in activities available during unlock and the prison offers a timetable of regular and varied activities.<sup>5</sup>

- 3.1 Time out of cell for prisoners in the LDU was good at over eight hours a day, but was poor for many in the reception site. Prisoners held in Britannia House had unrestricted time out of cell. The actual experience of individual prisoners varied across the prison, as did the application of the core day. Association was limited to two periods a week for many prisoners, and those not fully employed could have as little as just over two hours a day out of cell.
- The published core day indicated that a fully employed prisoner could achieve about nine hours a day out of cell on Monday to Thursday and about 6.5 hours on Fridays, Saturday and Sunday. In practice, however, time out of cell at the reception site was much less for a significant number who did not work or attend education. We estimated that unemployed prisoners could get only about 2.5 hours a day if attending daily exercise and association. However, time out of cell for prisoners in the local discharge unit (LDU) was good at about eight or nine hours a day, and it was unrestricted for those on Britannia House.
- 3.3 Overall, the prison reported that the average time that prisoners spent out of their cells was over eight hours a day. This was only consistent with an overgenerous interpretation of the core day based on most prisoners being unlocked as scheduled, and the inclusion of prisoners in the LDU. We found that on most wings prisoners received only about four hours evening association per week over two days, and sometimes less for vulnerable prisoners on A6 landing. There was also regime slippage caused by the late unlocking of prisoners on A, B and C wings. At a roll check during the morning of the core day, for example, we found about 40% of the population locked in their cells and during the afternoon this rose to just under 50% (see main recommendation HP60).

Recommendation

3.4 Prisoners should have evening association on four evenings a week. (Repeated recommendation HP55)

<sup>5</sup> Time out of cell, in addition to formal 'purposeful activity', includes any time prisoners are out of their cells to associate or use communal facilities to take showers or make telephone calls.

Learning and skills and work activities

Expected outcomes:

All prisoners can engage in activities that are purposeful, benefit them and increase their employability. Prisoners are encouraged and enabled to learn both during and after their sentence. The learning and skills and work provision is of a good standard and is effective in meeting the needs of all prisoners.

3.5 Recent restructuring and reorganisation had resulted in improved management of learning and skills and work activities. Too many prisoners remained unemployed, with around half on the reception site not participating in meaningful work, but on the LDU about 80% were engaged in activities. Too much work was mundane and repetitive, especially for vulnerable prisoners, and not all available places were used. Punctuality had improved but attendance remained poor in education and the contract workshops. Staff often interrupted sessions to take prisoners to appointments. Education provision had improved with the introduction of short courses for those in the prison for short periods. Achievement of accredited qualifications was good. The provision of learning and skills for vulnerable prisoners was very poor. The library provided access for most prisoners, except those on M wing who were employed. Book stock loss was very high.

Management of learning and skills and work

- 3.6 The leadership and management of learning and skills and work activities had improved, and there were closer links with regimes with developments focused on the reduction of reoffending.
- 3.7 Managers had used the prison's thorough training needs analysis, linked to labour market information, to improve vocational training and work activities. Plans to develop a new vocational training centre were well advanced, and there were additional training areas and contract work opportunities. The strategic direction for development was clear, although not included in a formal statement, and action plans were not always linked or sufficiently prioritised.
- 3.8 Although there had been improvements, progress to address our previous recommendations had been slow and insufficient. Some quality assurance arrangements had improved. The quality improvement group had been re-established and was effective. The self-assessment report for 2010/11 was largely descriptive, with insufficient evidence to support judgements and some areas for improvement not identified, although the procedure was being revised. The observation of teaching and learning in education was good, but activities in work and vocational training were not yet observed to improve the provision.
- Too many prisoners were unemployed and the management of data was weak. Data were collected to identify the places allocated to activities, but the prison failed to monitor full-time and part-time attendance clearly. The data we analysed showed that, on average, one-third of prisoners were not engaged in purposeful activities (around half on the reception site and 20% in the LDU). On many occasions the print shop was less than 60% occupied (see main recommendation HP60).

Provision of activities

- 3.10 The provision and number of activity places remained a key area for improvement, particularly on the reception site. Contract print work provided good quality work on the reception site, but had been limited by reductions in external contracts. On average, attendance at this workshop was approximately 60%. Purposeful activities for vulnerable prisoners were very poor and they were offered inadequate education, with opportunities limited to one or two individual half-hour sessions in literacy, numeracy and English for speakers of other languages (ESOL). There were still no learning and skills and work activities in the inpatient or segregation units. The position was somewhat better for those prisoners held on the LDU, and those in Britannia House were well served with a range of purposeful activities, including opportunities to work in the community.
- 3.11 Vocational training was insufficient across both sites, but particularly poor on the reception site. There were well-advanced plans to increase the provision and low number of places on the reception site but this had not significantly improved since the last inspection. Education provision had improved with the implementation of short programmes, which better met the needs of prisoners in the prison for a short time. Accredited painting and decorating and kitchen skills programmes had been successfully introduced in the LDU but some waiting lists were too long. The prison was unaware of the range and time that prisoners spent on activities in the wings. There was good use of work in the house and gardens in Britannia House for prisoners waiting for security clearance, and all activity places there were fully and well utilised.
- 3.12 The labour allocation system had recently changed. Allocation to jobs was sometimes based on requests by prisoners and agreement by staff, rather than as a direct result of the labour allocation process. The new system was seeking to address this issue. Waiting lists were too high for education and training programmes and insufficient programmes were offered, although the education contract was maximised. Prisoners' pay did not disadvantage those wishing to access learning and skills and most jobs offered similar pay rates. However, pay for prisoners beyond retirement age and who chose not to work was poor at £5 per week.

Recommendations

- 3.13 All prisoners, including those in the inpatient and segregation units, should be provided with and participate in high quality purposeful activities.
- 3.14 Learners' time should be better planned to reduce interruptions and disruptions to their activities.
- 3.15 The prison should increase basic retirement pay for those beyond retirement age who choose not to work.

Quality of provision

3.16 Prisoners received good initial guidance about the vocational training and education programmes available. The use of initial assessment in literacy and numeracy was good. However, although there was a new initial assessment to identify support needs for prisoners with English as an additional language, this information was not used sufficiently across the prison. Teaching and learning were mostly good, with particularly good management of behaviour in sessions and effective use of prisoners as peer mentors. Seventeen mentors had been trained for the Toe-by-Toe reading scheme, but there were only seven learners with little

- promotion of the scheme from wing officers. There was insufficient expertise to support dyslexic learners.
- 3.17 Resources for printwork were of a very high commercial standard and a few prisoners successfully followed an accredited qualification at level 1. Prison instructional officers provided good support and assessment. Resources for education varied considerably. Learning areas on the reception site were bright, spacious and welcoming. The downstairs rooms in the LDU were large and inviting, but those upstairs required considerable refurbishment. Prisoners in Britannia House could take part in good quality training with a range of external providers.
- 3.18 Careers information and advice was provided by Tribal staff, who were the contracted provider. This was good at induction and most prisoners were given support before release. However, many prisoners, particularly those on longer sentences, received insufficient support during their sentence. Tribal did not provide information and advice on career progression or job search for prisoners in Britannia House.

Recommendations

- 3.19 The prison should improve the quality of careers advice, education, vocational training and work for vulnerable prisoners.
- 3.20 Initial assessments of the English language skills of prisoners who speak English as an additional language and those with dyslexia should be used to provide appropriate support throughout the prison.
- 3.21 The prison should refurbish the upstairs education rooms in the local discharge unit.

Education and vocational achievements

3.22 The introduction of short programmes of learning had been particularly successful.

Achievements of qualifications were good in most areas, and most learners stayed on programmes and completed them. There was little use of distance learning or Open University provision. New arrivals who had already started a programme were supported to continue it. Intermediate and higher level learning opportunities for those serving longer sentences were inadequately promoted. Skills developed by prisoners not undertaking accredited qualifications in areas such as the print shop and external work placements were rarely recognised and recorded.

Recommendation

3.23 Prisoners' development of non-accredited skills should be recognised and recorded.

Library

- 3.24 The library was provided by Norfolk County Council. There had been a strong commitment to improving the library following a realistic and accurate evaluation of the service.
- 3.25 Prisoner access to the library had increased at the three libraries in the reception unit, the LDU and B and C wings, and satellite libraries on E, H and L wings and the segregation unit.

However, prisoners on M wing allocated to work still did not have sufficient opportunity to use the library. The libraries were fully staffed and each had one orderly, with plans for them to be trained in customer care. New arrivals did not receive a full induction to the library.

- 3.26 The quality of the stock had increased, but book loss was very high at 16% in 2011. A new computerised system to record and track loans had not been introduced until December 2011 and was still not fully operational.
- 3.27 The library had insufficient links with learning and skills and work activities staff to ensure the provision of sufficient reference material. The computers for prisoners were too old to handle modern multi-media resources.

Recommendations

- 3.28 All prisoners should have good access to the library and receive a full induction to the service.
- 3.29 There should be better links between the library and learning and skills and work staff to ensure the provision of appropriate up-to-date material, and computers for prisoners in the libraries should be upgraded.

Housekeeping point

3.30 Library book loss should be significantly reduced.

Physical education and healthy living

Expected outcomes:

All prisoners understand the importance of healthy living, and are encouraged and enabled to participate in physical education in safe and decent surroundings.

- 3.31 The physical education and healthy living provision continued to be impressive, and staffing levels and resources had improved. Very good relationships with prison staff and external agencies had led to a well-planned and delivered health screening programme for prisoners. There were additional facilities on the reception site, and good developments to link relevant qualifications to employment opportunities. Access to PE for most prisoners remained good, but was insufficient for those fully employed during the day.
- 3.32 Physical education and healthy living provision continued to be high quality and supported by a significant increase in staff since the last inspection. There was good provision for prisoners with drug dependence and health issues, with effective links with health care. Trained PE staff and prisoners, who are trained as Health Trainers, provided an innovative health screening programme for prisoners in conjunction with nurse practitioners. External links with NHS funded training of prisoners to deliver the programme facilitated by Horizon Health. Two PE staff had been allocated to developing community links, and there had been some work placement and employment opportunities with a national fitness and leisure organisation for prisoners in Britannia House.

- 3.33 Staffing had increased significantly, and PE was offered daily, in the evenings and at weekends. However, access to PE was limited for prisoners who were fully employed. A good range of qualifications was offered and achievements were high across all programmes.
- 3.34 Significant investment had improved the PE resources in the LDU but there were no privacy screens in the showers, toilets were inadequate and no drinking water was available. A new gym with showers had been built on the reception site, although the showers lacked proper ventilation. Outside facilities were well used in the LDU, but there were none on the reception site.

Recommendations

- 3.35 The prison should install privacy screens in the showers and improve the toilet facilities for the gym on the local discharge unit.
- 3.36 The prison should plan outdoor PE facilities on the reception site.

Housekeeping points

- 3.37 Fresh drinking water should be provided for prisoners in the PE provision in the LDU.
- 3.38 The extraction and ventilation facilities in the gym showers on the reception site should be improved.

Section 4: Resettlement

The reference numbers at the end of some recommendations indicate that that they are repeated, and provide the paragraph location of the previous recommendation in the last report.

Strategic management of resettlement

Expected outcomes:

Planning for a prisoner's release or transfer starts on their arrival at the prison. Resettlement underpins the work of the whole prison, supported by strategic partnerships in the community and informed by assessment of prisoner risk and need. Good planning ensures a seamless transition into the community.

- 4.1 A comprehensive needs analysis underpinned the resettlement strategy but identified significant shortfalls in provision, primarily to address offending behaviour. Prisoners on the LDU continued to have better access to resettlement services and generally believed staff were more supportive in relation to release, although both sides of the prison released broadly the same number of prisoners. Prisoners at Britannia House were even more positive.
- 4.2 The resettlement strategy, updated in April 2011, was comprehensive and detailed with appropriate links to regional and national developments and policies. The policy covered all key aspects of resettlement, including each pathway and offender management. A detailed action plan underpinned the policy with identified targets and development objectives. Although the bimonthly resettlement strategy group monitored progress, some developments and objectives were out of date.
- 4.3 The resettlement strategy group covered a broadly appropriate range of issues, and a separate bimonthly pathways and partnerships group ensured generally good links between the work of pathway providers.
- 4.4 The needs analysis was comprehensive and detailed. It was based on OASys (offender assessment system) data for prisoners serving over 12 months (approximately 60% of the population), along with a questionnaire and focus group that included remand prisoners and those serving less than 12 months. The analysis had identified some significant gaps in the provision available, particularly work addressing offending behaviour. In the questionnaire, over 63% of respondents said they had not attended any offending behaviour courses, and the OASys analysis indicated many prisoners with significant need for work on their attitudes and thinking. There was, however, provision for prisoners with substance misuse problems, including dedicated individual support, via the counselling, assessment, referral, advice and throughcare service (CARATs), and group work to address both alcohol and drug problems.
- 4.5 Overall resettlement provision and support remained better for prisoners on the local discharge unit (LDU) than on the reception site, even though both sites released similar numbers of prisoners each month. In our survey, significantly fewer respondents than the comparator said that a member of staff had helped them prepare for release, but with significant differences between the LDU (18%) and the reception site (7%). Prisoners on the LDU consistently reported a better understanding of and access to resettlement provision than those on the reception site. On Britannia House (category D), 67% of respondents said that a member of staff had helped them prepare for release, more than twice the category D comparator of 31%.

4.6 A good range of community-based partner agencies offered post-release support or work experience through release on temporary licence (ROTL). There were two resettlement officers, one based primarily in the community and the other in the prison, who were both well known across the establishment.

Recommendation

4.7 The resettlement strategy meeting and policy should ensure that all prisoners, particularly those who do not transfer to the local discharge unit (LDU), have equitable and consistent access to resettlement services. (Repeated recommendation 9.18)

Offender management and planning

Expected outcomes:

All prisoners have a sentence plan based on an individual assessment of risk and need, which is regularly reviewed and implemented throughout and after their time in custody. Prisoners, together with all relevant staff, are involved in drawing up and reviewing plans.

- 4.8 Although all prisoners were subject to an initial assessment against resettlement pathways, the information collected was limited, targets set vague and there was no ongoing monitoring of those on remand or short sentences. Work for prisoners subject to offender management was generally good, although external communication for low and medium risk prisoners needed improvement. Transfers to prisons able to provide offending behaviour work needed improving. Public protection arrangements were good, and work with indeterminate-sentenced prisoners was generally appropriate.
- All new arrivals had some form of needs assessment. Tribal staff completed an evaluation of training and education needs that also considered wider resettlement need under each pathway and made referrals where appropriate. In practice, this process was very limited as Tribal focused on education and training and had little detailed knowledge about other pathways, and the assessment was based on self-disclosure with no wider evaluation. A plan was drawn up after the assessment, which focused on education and training targets with only referrals mentioned under the pathway work. Although copies of the plan were forwarded to the offender management unit (OMU), prisoners on remand and serving less than 12 months (40% of the population) had no contact with OMU, and no one else had responsibility to support them in meeting any identified resettlement objectives (see main recommendation HP62).
- 4.10 OMU staff included a combination of probation officers, probation service officers and psychology assistants. A part-time senior probation officer undertook casework management reviews and supervision of probation staff, and the head of offender management did the same for psychology staff. Staff demonstrated a good understanding of offender assessment and risk management.
- 4.11 Only around one quarter (195) of prisoners were formally in scope for offender management, although a further 35% (272) were serving over 12 months and were also subject to OASys assessment and post-release supervision. In-scope prisoners were generally well managed with regular, usually monthly, contact. Communication with offender managers was good and feedback about the level and quality of engagement was positive. Communication about out-

- of-scope prisoners, however, was less positive, and some offender managers felt that they had not received sufficient information from OMU before the prisoner's release. At the time of the inspection, 94% of all OASys assessments were up to date.
- 4.12 Sentence planning arrangements were variable, with inconsistent contributions from departments and sentence planning meetings rarely attended by staff other than the offender supervisor and offender manager; personal officers rarely made contributions. Sentence planning meetings for out-of-scope prisoners were usually just between the offender supervisor and prisoner to agree targets. Where offender managers did contribute to meetings, facilities at the prison were limited, and there were no teleconferencing facilities. Despite these problems, the sentence planning targets we saw were generally appropriate. Targets and evaluations of need for prisoners subject to OASys but not offender management were not routinely forwarded to identified offender managers.
- 4.13 Britannia House offered a positive opportunity for the 42 prisoners there to develop employment skills and experience before release. They usually had at least six months still to serve when they entered the category D facility. Around 40 prisoners at a time worked outside the prison and were subject to ROTL, most from Britannia House, although prisoners on the LDU could also have accessed such provision, subject to risk assessment. One LDU prisoner was working out at the time of the inspection, although there were sufficient work placements for around 70 prisoners.
- 4.14 There were difficulties in moving prisoners with identified sentence planning targets that could not be achieved at Norwich to alternative establishments especially sex offenders and some indeterminate-sentenced prisoners, even though offender supervisors assessed the needs of the former reasonably quickly. There was a monthly meeting to prioritise prisoners for transfer, mostly for security purposes. The number of prisoners who moved varied considerably but had averaged around 15 to 18 a week in the previous month. We found prisoners who had been waiting more then 10 months for a progressive move.

Recommendations

- 4.15 All staff and departments that have contact with prisoners, especially high and very high risk offenders, should be actively involved in their sentence planning.
- 4.16 Information sharing and communication between offender supervisors and offender managers should be improved, especially for out-of-scope prisoners, with quality assurance to ensure consistency.
- 4.17 The number of prisoners subject to release on temporary licence and working out of the prison should be extended to include more of those in the local discharge unit.
- 4.18 Prisoners who are unable to address their offending behaviour at Norwich should be moved to an appropriate establishment with minimum delay, and the prison should monitor prisoners released without completing offending behaviour work to establish and address the extent of the problem.

Housekeeping point

4.19 Appropriate facilities, including teleconferencing, should be available for all sentence planning meetings.

Public protection

4.20 Public protection arrangements were well organised and managed, with monthly strategic meetings, fortnightly inter-departmental risk management team (IDRMT) meetings and a risk assessment group (RAG). All cases were given appropriate focus and meetings looked at information in detail. Offender supervisors maintained responsibility for their cases and attended IDRMT or RAG meetings as required. At the time of the inspection, the prison held six multi-agency public protection arrangements (MAPPA) level three prisoners and 31 level two. A further 151 prisoners were MAPPA nominals (targeted for legitimate security reasons). There were appropriate arrangements to manage the 87 prisoners assessed as a risk to children and 96 subject to harassment monitoring.

Categorisation

4.21 Arrangements for recategorisation were appropriate and prisoners were automatically reviewed. In the previous six months, 22 of 90 prisoners reviewed (24%) had been successfully recategorised to D. Similarly, the prison automatically started the process for assessing prisoners for home detention curfew (HDC) and generally managed it appropriately. Although around 65% of prisoners considered were successful in achieving HDC, prisoners continued to be transferred while the process was under way.

Indeterminate sentence prisoners

4.22 At the time of the inspection, there were 39 prisoners serving life sentences and a further 32 on an indeterminate sentence for public protection (IPP). All indeterminate-sentenced prisoners were allocated to one of the probation staff in the OMU. Contact was frequent and oriented to risk assessment and progression. Where necessary, MARAP and multi-agency lifer risk assessment panel (MALRAP) meetings were undertaken, and all were up to date at the time of the inspection. The prison identified prisoners on remand likely to receive an indeterminate sentence and offered support and guidance.

Reintegration planning

Expected outcomes:

Prisoners' resettlement needs are addressed prior to release. An effective multi-agency response is used to meet the specific needs of each individual prisoner in order to maximise the likelihood of successful reintegration into the community.

- 4.23 Reintegration planning varied across the two prison sites, although it was good on the LDU. Access for prisoners on the reception site was significantly worse in most areas. Pathway work overall was generally reasonable, although more debt management support was needed. Support for visitors was good, but entry to visits was slow and needed improvement.
- 4.24 Arrangements for reintegration planning on the LDU were generally good, and prisoners here could see relevant resettlement services and departments with relative ease. There were also weekly drop-in clinics where prisoners could see providers. In the previous few weeks, similar arrangements had been put into place on the reception site but attendance had been poor. In our survey, significantly fewer respondents on the reception site knew who to speak to about

- accommodation, education, benefits and employment. However, support for problem drug and alcohol users was consistently available on both sites.
- 4.25 Tribal staff undertook exit interviews and assessments approximately eight to 12 weeks before release and, where issues were still identified as barriers to effective resettlement, could make referrals to pathways. However, these pre-release assessments were limited and still did not include effective follow-up support or structured pre-release plans.

Recommendations

- 4.26 All sentenced prisoners should have a structured pre-release meeting with input from relevant departments, which reviews their sentence/custody plan and identifies key post-release targets that are forwarded to offender managers, where appropriate.
- 4.27 The prison should expand the range of resettlement pathways provision to meet the needs of prisoners, including debt management work and parenting courses.

Accommodation

- 4.28 Accommodation support was provided by Nacro with two full-time workers in post. The resettlement strategy group minutes and the results of needs analysis focus groups indicated consistent problems with the level of provision. Many prisoners complained that they had received little support or follow up to initial assessments. These problems appeared to have been resolved, although there were plans to increase the support available.
- 4.29 Prisoners were seen during their induction to identify and pursue any issues about maintaining previous tenancies or debt-related housing problems, and also in the last 12 months before release to find accommodation. Nacro helped approximately 10% of prisoners released each month to find accommodation. In our survey, 22% of respondents on the reception site said they had experienced problems with accommodation when they first arrived at Norwich. In the previous three months, 2.5% of released prisoners went to temporary accommodation and 4% had no fix accommodation.

Education, training and employment

- 4.30 There were insufficient vocational training opportunities to meet prisoners' resettlement needs, although the qualifications offered in PE provided real support for employment and prisoners were able to reach level 3 in appropriate and relevant skills (see also main recommendation HP61).
- 4.31 The previous contract with the Foundation Training Company for pre-release programmes had ceased and there was no longer any formal structured pre-release provision. Experienced staff from external agencies, such as Nacro and Move on East, provided one-to-one support for dealing with disclosure, interview techniques and writing CVs. The 'virtual campus' providing job search support was in its early stages.
- 4.32 The Britannia House resettlement unit was an excellent facility, well managed and very successful in providing ROTL for job search and training, community placements and employment. In particular the Chapelfield project and 'Making Ground' project with May Gurney had provided a wide and relevant range of opportunities to meet prisoners' resettlement needs.

Health care

4.33 Nurses identified prisoners due for release and offered them pre-discharge health checks and planning. Discharge summaries were provided for their GP, and take-home medication and harm-minimisation packs were available. Prisoners on the LDU were often released before health care staff came on duty and left the prison without their medications, but this would be rectified when a revised staffing roster was introduced. There was a palliative and end-of-life care policy, and there were advance directives and regular gold standard framework meetings. Palliative care was of a high standard. Partnerships in Care staff acted as case managers to ensure coordinated transfer of care for patients subject to the care programme approach who were being released.

Drugs and alcohol

4.34 The prison had led a review of IDTS services across all Eastern region prisons. Subsequent action resulted in improved transfer of prisoners requiring substance misuse support to other prisons in the area. There were good links with local drug intervention programme teams and discharge planning was adequate. Prisoners received information on harm minimisation from nursing and CARAT staff from reception through to release.

Finance, benefit and debt

4.35 Provision under the finance benefit and debt pathway was underdeveloped. The prison's needs analysis had identified over 51% of the population with 'some or significant' issues with their financial situation. Despite this, there was no longer any debt management provision on either site. Prisoners could open a bank account and there was a three-week basic budgeting course, although attendance at this was low with only three prisoners on the programme during the inspection.

Recommendation

4.36 There should be adequate support for prisoners with a finance, benefit or debt problem.

Children, families and contact with the outside world

- 4.37 The visitors' centre was run by the Ormiston Trust and open before and after visits sessions. Its impressive support included an accredited crèche where workers took children part-way through visits sessions to allow prisoners to have time with their family and partner separately. This provision mitigated the very limited play facilities in the visits halls. The Ormiston Trust had established good community links and provided appropriate access and information to families visiting the establishment. There was also a good range of information for families visiting prison for the first time
- 4.38 'Baby bonding' and Storybook Dads were also available. Ormiston provided and facilitated children's visits on both the reception site and LDU weekly on weekdays and once a month at weekends. Sessions were open to all prisoners with children, subject to security risk

- assessments but regardless of their IEP status. However, the prison no longer ran any parenting courses for prisoners and/or their partners.
- 4.39 There was reasonable access to the visits telephone booking line and no significant delays. Visits could be booked by email, but this service was rarely used. During the inspection, a visit could be booked for the following day on the LDU and in three days' time in the main visits hall.
- 4.40 There was still a significant problem of delays for visitors in getting to the visits hall. The process of managing visitors through the main prison gate was slow, and there were often delays while prison vans were managed through the same area. We saw some visitors not able to get to the visits hall until almost an hour after the session had started, and we were told that this problem was not unusual.
- 4.41 Up until shortly before our inspection, prisoners were held in one of three small holding rooms in the visits area to await their visit, which many prisoners complained about and felt to be inappropriate. During the inspection, prisoners waited in the main visits hall. We were told that this had caused some problems with abuse shouted at vulnerable prisoners waiting for their visit, but we saw no direct evidence of this.
- 4.42 The main visits hall was large enough to accommodate up to 39 families, but was austere and could be very noisy when full. Both visitors and prisoners could use toilet facilities during visits. All prisoners had to wear bibs during visits, which was disproportionate.

Recommendation

4.43 All visitors should be able to take their visits in time to benefit from the whole session, and in a relaxed and calm environment.

Attitudes, thinking and behaviour

4.44 The only accredited programme was the building skills for recovery drug programme (see paragraph 1.92). Further non-accredited programmes included the Norwich alcohol course and the A2Z motivational enhancement programme, but while both programmes were beneficial neither addressed offending behaviour. The prison's need analysis had identified significant gaps in provision, but these remained. It was not possible to identify the number of prisoners released from Norwich who had not engaged in any work to address their offending behaviour but, given the problems of transferring prisoners to appropriate establishments and from offender management feedback on recently released prisoners, it appeared to be significant. Offender supervisors did not regularly or consistently engage in structured one-to-one work to address offending behaviour to compensate for the limitations of programmes (see recommendation 4.18).

Appendix II: Progress on recommendations from the last report

The following is a summary of the main findings from the last report and a list of all the recommendations made, organised under the four tests of a healthy prison. The reference numbers at the end of each recommendation refer to the paragraph location in the previous report. If a recommendation has been repeated in the main report, its new paragraph number is provided in the right-hand column.

Safety

Prisoners, particularly the most vulnerable, are held safely.

At the last inspection, in 2010, reception procedures were generally satisfactory but the environment was poor. First night procedures were carried out in reception. Newly arrived vulnerable prisoners were held in segregation or on A5 landing. We were not assured that all prisoners, in particular vulnerable prisoners received induction. Violence reduction and self-harm procedures had been given a high priority and were generally effective, but the volume of monitoring documents affected the quality of case management. The segregation regime was limited but access to amenities was reasonable and risk assessment and unlock protocols required clarification. Use of force was significant, but there was some evidence that it was reducing. Prisoners, including those on the vulnerable prisoners unit, felt safe. Integrated drug treatment system (IDTS) procedures were good and continuing to develop. We found that outcomes for prisoners in Norwich were reasonably good against this healthy prison test.

Respect

Prisoners are treated with respect for their human dignity.

At the last inspection, in 2010, the environment in the main prison was good except for E wing, which was poor, and the grounds, which were littered. The limitations of the LDU were mitigated by a reasonable unlock regime, but cells were too small and facilities were inadequate. Staff-prisoner relationships were reasonable, but young and black and minority ethnic prisoners had poorer perceptions. Personal officer work was limited. Race equality work was prioritised, and there was some work on disability, but black and minority ethnic prisoners still had negative perceptions of their experience. Work on other strands of diversity, including foreign nationals and older prisoners, was underdeveloped. The food was satisfactory but repetitive, and better consultation with prisoners was needed. Prisoners had limited confidence in the handling of applications and complaints. Health care provision was complex and the inpatient regime limited, although the quality of care was improving. Mental health care was inadequate to meet need and access to health services needed to be better organised. We found that outcomes for prisoners in Norwich were not sufficiently good against this healthy prison test.

Main recommendations
Single cells should not be used for double occupancy, especially on the local discharge unit. (HP50)	Not achieved.

Purposeful activity

Prisoners are able, and expected, to engage in activity that is likely to benefit them.

At the last inspection, in 2010, the education curriculum was narrow and the quality of teaching variable. Management of learning and skills was weak and none of the concerns identified at our last in section had been addressed. Achievements for those who completed courses were reasonable, but punctuality and attendance were poor. Vocational training was very limited and low level. The number and quality of activity places was inadequate, with about a third of prisoners recorded as unemployed. PE provision was impressive, despite the limited facilities, and access was good. Time out of cell and access to association were generally poor, especially in the main prison where we found half the population locked in cell during the working day. On the local discharge unit, prisoners were unlocked for much of the day. The small number of prisoners on Britannia House had an open regime with good access to work, training and activity. We found that outcomes for prisoners in Norwich were poor against this healthy prison test.

Main recommendations
Prisoners should have evening association on four evenings a week. (HP55)	Not achieved. (Recommendation repeated, 3.4)
Leadership and management of learning and skills should be improved, and quality assurance mechanisms should be in place to improve standards of teaching and learning. (HP52)	Partially achieved.

shower after sessions. (6.39)

The association room on the local discharge unit should be refurbished and re-equipped. (6.50)	Not achieved
The library stock should be improved to meet the needs of the population, including more material in foreign languages. (6.30)	Not achieved

Resettlement

Prisoners are prepared for their release back into the community and effectively helped to reduce the likelihood of reoffending.

At the last inspection, in 2010, there had been some progress in the prison's approach to resettlement, despite weak governance structures and no recent needs analysis. The introduction of the LDU had begun to address the needs of local prisoners. Britannia House continued to provide a good quality resettlement service. Offender management arrangements were good, and there was custody planning for prisoners on the LDU. There was no sentence planning and limited resettlement provision for most prisoners in the main prison. The case management of indeterminate-sentenced prisoners was satisfactory, but service provision was less well developed. Services across most of the resettlement pathways were reasonable. We found that outcomes for prisoners were reasonably good against this healthy prison test.

Main recommendations
The prison's resettlement strategy should be linked to the regional strategy, and should recognise and make provision for meeting the needs of all prisoners from the time of reception. (HP56)	Achieved
Recommendations
The resettlement strategy should be underpinned by a clear action plan with development milestones, and progress should be monitored by the resettlement strategy meeting. (9.15)	Achieved

Appendix IV: Summary of prisoner questionnaires and interviews

Prisoner survey methodology

A voluntary, confidential and anonymous survey of a representative proportion of the prisoner population was carried out for this inspection. The results of this survey formed part of the evidence base for the inspection.

Choosing the sample size

The baseline for the sample size was calculated using a robust statistical formula provided by a government department statistician. Essentially, the formula indicates the sample size that is required and the extent to which the findings from a sample of that size reflect the experiences of the whole population.

At the time of the survey on 10 January 2012, the prisoner population at HMP Norwich was 709. The sample size was 203. Overall, this represented 29% of the prisoner population.

Britannia House, a resettlement unit at HMP Norwich with a discrete open prison function, was sampled separately. This unit held 42 prisoners and all were offered a survey.

Selecting the sample

Respondents were randomly selected from a P-Nomis prisoner population printout using a stratified systematic sampling method. This basically means every second person is selected from a P-Nomis list, which is printed in location order, if 50% of the population is to be sampled.

Completion of the questionnaire was voluntary. Refusals were noted and no attempts were made to replace them. Eight respondents refused to complete a questionnaire.

Interviews were carried out with any respondents with literacy difficulties. Two respondents were interviewed.

Methodology

Every attempt was made to distribute the questionnaires to each respondent on an individual basis. This gave researchers an opportunity to explain the independence of the Inspectorate and the purpose of the questionnaire, as well as to answer questions.

All completed questionnaires were confidential – only members of the Inspectorate saw them. In order to ensure confidentiality, respondents were asked to do one of the following:

- have their questionnaire ready to hand back to a member of the research team at a specified time;
- to seal the questionnaire in the envelope provided and hand it to a member of staff, if they were agreeable; or to seal the questionnaire in the envelope provided and leave it in their room for collection.

Respondents were not asked to put their names on their questionnaire.

Response rates

On the main site, 173 respondents completed and returned their questionnaires. This represented 24% of the prison population. The response rate was 85%. In addition to the eight respondents who refused to complete a questionnaire, 10 questionnaires were not returned and 12 were returned blank.

At Britannia House, 27 respondents completed and returned their questionnaires. This represented 64% of the population of this unit and, as all prisoners received a survey, this was also the response rate. Eleven questionnaires were not returned and four were returned blank.

Comparisons

The following details the results from the survey. Data from each establishment have been weighted, in order to mimic a consistent percentage sampled in each establishment.

Some questions have been filtered according to the response to a previous question. Filtered questions are clearly indented and preceded by an explanation as to which respondents are included in the filtered questions. Otherwise, percentages provided refer to the entire sample. All missing responses are excluded from the analysis.

The following analyses have been conducted:

- The current main site survey responses in 2012 against comparator figures for all prisoners surveyed in local prisons. This comparator is based on all responses from prisoner surveys carried out in 37 local prisons since 2006.
- The current survey responses in 2012 against the responses of prisoners surveyed at HMP Norwich in 2010.
- The Britannia House survey responses in 2012 against comparator figures for all prisoners surveyed in open prisons. The comparator is based on all responses from prisoner surveys in 13 open prisons since 2007.
- A comparison within the 2012 survey between the responses of white prisoners and those from a black and minority ethnic group.
- A comparison within the 2012 survey between those who are British and those who are foreign nationals.
- A comparison within the 2012 survey between the responses of prisoners who consider themselves to have a disability and those who do not.
- A comparison within the 2012 survey between those aged 50 and over and those under 50.
- A comparison within the 2012 survey between those aged 21 and under and those over 21.
- A comparison within the 2012 survey between responses of prisoners who consider themselves to be veterans (ex-armed services) and those who do not.
- A comparison within the 2012 survey between the vulnerable prisoner wings (E and a landing on A) and the rest of the establishment.

In all the above documents, statistical significance is used to indicate whether there is a real difference between the figures, i.e. the difference is not due to chance alone. Results that are significantly better are indicated by green shading, results that are significantly worse are indicated by blue shading and where there is no significant difference, there is no shading. Orange shading has been used to show a significant difference in prisoners' background details.

It should be noted that, in order for statistical comparisons to be made between the most recent survey data and those of the previous survey, both sets of data have been coded in the same way. This may result in changes to percentages from previously published surveys. However, all percentages are true of the populations they were taken from, and the statistical significance is correct.

Summary

In addition, a summary of the survey results is attached. This shows a breakdown of responses for each question as well as examples of comments made by prisoners. Percentages have been rounded and therefore may not add up to 100%.

No questions have been filtered within the summary so all percentages refer to responses from the entire sample. The percentages to certain responses within the summary, for example 'not sentenced' options across questions, may differ slightly. This is due to different response rates across questions, meaning that the percentages have been calculated out of different totals (all missing data is excluded). The actual numbers will match up as the data are cleaned to be consistent.

Percentages shown in the summary may differ by 1% or 2% from those shown in the comparison data as the comparator data have been weighted for comparison purposes.
