

Thames Valley Police has made good progress in achieving its savings for the comprehensive spending review period.

Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary (HMIC) has today published a report on Thames Valley Police's progress in meeting the challenges of the 2010 comprehensive spending review.

A thematic report, Policing in Austerity: One Year On, found that police forces across England and Wales have risen to the financial challenge of the spending review, cutting their spending while largely maintaining the service they provide to the public; but HMIC has some concerns about whether all forces have transformed their efficiency to the extent that this can be sustained through the next three years (and into future spending reviews).

Based on the data provided by the force, HMIC found:

- Money: Thames Valley Police needs to save £55 million between 2011 and 2015. By spring 2012 they had planned how to save 100% of this amount.
- People: The force is planning to cut its total workforce number (i.e. police officers, police staff and police community support officers) by 360 between March 2010 and March 2015.
- 120 of these will be police officer posts. This means there will be 3% fewer officers in Thames Valley (compared with a 10% reduction across England and Wales).
- The front line: By 2015, 73% of its total workforce will be in frontline roles. This is broadly in line with most other forces.
- The proportion of police officers on the front line increases over the same period (from 81% to 90%). Again, this percentage is similar to the figure for England and Wales as a whole.
- Crime: Crime rates fell in Thames Valley between December 2010 and December 2011. In fact, the force achieved the highest reduction in overall crime in the whole of England and Wales.
- Victim satisfaction: 85% of victims were satisfied with the service they received from Thames Valley Police. This is above the national figure.

HM Inspector of Constabulary for the Eastern region, Zoe Billingham, said:

“Thames Valley Police has a history of bringing down costs while increasing its efficiency and effectiveness. As a result, it is in a good position to achieve its savings target by 2015 – and may even exceed it.

“The force plans to significantly increase the proportion of its police officers dedicated to frontline, crime-fighting roles by 2015. This will help Thames Valley Police in its efforts to maintain its impressive performance in bringing down crime.”

8. Her Majesty’s Inspectorate of Constabulary (HMIC) carried out an inspection of all 43 police forces in England and Wales in spring 2011, to see how they were planning to meet this financial challenge. When the results were published in July 2011 (search for ‘Valuing the Police’ on www.hmic.gov.uk), we committed to returning one year later to report on progress, and to assess whether there had been any impact on the service provided to the public.
